Dedication To Farming Pays Off At Brookfield Farms

Mehrle and Thelma Ramsburg relax with three of their four grandchildren at Brookfield Farms near Utica, Maryland. The children are from left, Whitney Diane Crist, Jacob Roop, and Lauren Roop.

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

UTICA, Md. — You don't have to look very hard to see how dedicated Mehrle H. Ramsburg, Jr. is to agriculture; it's evident in every aspect of his life. It shows in the neat-as-a-pin appearance of his and his wife Thelma's Brookfield Farms. You can tell it by looking at his crop yields; numbers like 5.75 tons to the acre of alfalfa haylage, 18 tons of corn silage per acre, and 90 bushels of barley per acre. And the inspirational way he has kept farming despite a tragic PTO accident that took his right arm speaks volumes about his love of dairying. The numerous awards and honors he has accumulated, including most recently being honored as a Master Farmer, speak for themselves.

Mehrle Ramsburg is the 4th generation of his family to milk cows at Brookfield Farms, a Maryland Century Farm. His great-grandfather purchased the farm in 1882. When they started in January of 1961, Mehrle and Thelma had 44 cows. Over the next two years 10 cows were purchased. The herd has been closed since then. Now they are up to 300

Dairy Cooperative Reports Good Year

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

HAGERSTOWN, Md. - The general manager of a leading eastern milk producer's cooperative told the 700 members and guests present at the annual meeting Wednesday that the future of the dairy industry is in cooperation.

George Walgrove, Jr., Maryland and Virginia Cooperative Association, said producer groups, as well as cooperatives, need to participate in this joint effort.

"Each year I am asked if there is hope for the future of the dairy industry," Walgrove said. "Each year I say yes, because there are responsible people in the industry who care very much about the dairy farmers. These people have committed themselves to our industry to make it prosperous.

Marketing Forum Presents Pennsylvania Pride Potential

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The official marketing logo of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is, "Pennsylvania Pride — From our home to yours."

That logo could someday become the umbrella slogan for in-state-produced agricultural commodities, as part of a dedicated agricultural and commodity marketing program.

Or not.

The PDA Bureau of Market Development held a marketing forum last week in the state Agriculture Building in Harrisburg to bring together representatives of various segments of Pennsylvania agricultural producers to hear several speakers discuss current marketing analysis, research on consumer trends, and aspects of successful marketing programs.

Preconditioned Cattle Benefit The Bottom Line

ANDY ANDREWS

ADAMSTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — No longer is it good enough for cattle buyers to simply "look" at a set of calves and determine their quality, according to one animal expert.

Buyers want backgrounding information — genetic and other data that will show how to improve, as is often the case, a sagging bottom line.

And calf producers who can show the buyer a calf that has been preconditioned — properly weaned and vaccinated against respiratory diseases — has the potential to earn good premiums in the years to come, according to leading Midwest veterinarian.

Dr. Ken Odde, senior veterinarian at Pfizer Animal Health, Pollock, S.D., examined some of the benefits in terms of better price at auction and of improved herd health performance.

Odde spoke to 40 producers and agri-industry representatives on Tuesday, the first day of a first-time, on-the-road, three-day Eastern Cattlemen's Symposium which began at Weaver's Market in Adamstown.

Odde indicated that there is

NY Phil Frozen Eggs

MARCH 21, 1997

Prices were unchanged. The market tone was generally steady to instances cautiously steady. Demand was limited for trucklot needs, and inquiry for less-than-trucklot needs was light to moderate. Floor stocks were adequate. Breaking stock supplies were adequate to instances tight as breakers competed with strong shell egg markets as the Easter holiday neared. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the East for the week ending March 15, 1997 were 2% more than last week, and 9% more than last year.

Delmarva Broiler

MARCH 26, 1997

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds remained seasonal. Seller offerings were fully adequate to ample for immediate needs. Live supplies were moderate; weights were mixed in a full range of light to heavy, and were generally desirable. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 50 to 64 cents. Trade sentiment was about steady. In the parts complex, Bone-in breasts were in best demand and sellers held available offerings with confidence. Boneless skinless breasts were well balanced at some plants, fully adequate at others. Leg quarters and wings were in ample supply, but were generally noted as at manageable levels.

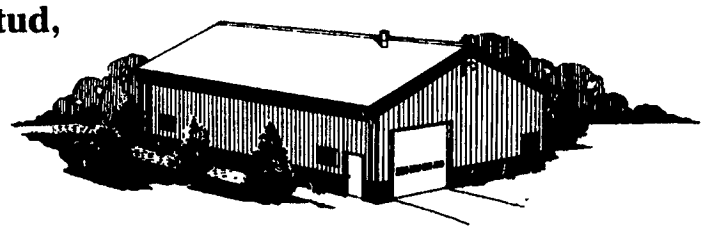
The Building you want.
The Lease you need.

Whether your new farm or commercial building is of pole, timber column, stud, steel or block construction; choose Telmark lease financing.



Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider the features:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: Beginning costs may be as little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms start aggressively at five years but may be as long as ten, twelve, or fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules match your cash flow. Payment options include monthly, quarterly, annually, as well as, skip or specially designed seasonal payments.

How do you start leasing a building from Telmark? Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost. And call your Telmark representative:

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

MARCH 31-APRIL 6, 1997

ALL FOOLS DAY

In honor of April 1, we remind you of some very foolish things that have happened within this month. Any fool knows that tax day is April 15, but fittingly, April is also the month the U.S. Mint was established, in 1792. Alec Guinness was born April 2, 1914, later gaining his fame by publishing every foolish feat that ever gained a record. And on April 7, 1857, snow fell in every southern state in the United States, just to make fools of the weathermen, no doubt. And finally, to cap off the foolishness, on April 29, 1848, Niagara Falls stopped flowing for 30 hours. Now that's foolish!

To be a fool at the right time is also an art.

TIP OF THE WEEK

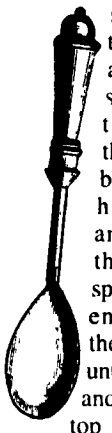
BERRY FOOL

1 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
8 slices white bread
1/2 cup butter, melted
2 10-ounce packages frozen raspberries
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon grated lemon rind
ice cream or whipped cream



Blend sugar and nutmeg. Brush bread slices with melted butter on both sides, then cut into 1/2-inch strips. Line the bottom of a loaf pan with a third of the bread, sprinkle with a third of the sugar and spice, then add half the raspberries. Sprinkle with half the lemon juice and rind, and another third of the sugar and spice. Continue layering, ending with bread on the top. Bake at 350° F until the juices are bubbly and the bread is crisp on top. Serve with ice cream or whipped cream.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

In March, the birds begin to search; in April the corn begins to fill; in May, the birds begin to lay.

First three days of April foggy, expect a flood in June.

Wise men make weather proverbs and all fools repeat them.

If St. Vincent's Day (Apr. 5) is fair, there will be more water than wine.

OPINION

The Prophet's Easter Story

WHO hath believed our report? And to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?

For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground; he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed from not.

Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.

But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.

All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned everyone to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.

He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

He was taken from prison and from judgment; and who shall declare his generation? For he was cut off out of the land of the living; for the transgression of my people was he stricken.

And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; because he had done no violence, neither, was any deceit in his mouth.

Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief; when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand.

He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisified; by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities.

Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he hath poured out his soul unto death; and he was numbered with the transgressors; and he bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors. Isaiah 53

Editor,

Although the picture and caption on the front page of the March 15th issue of Lancaster Farming is picturesque and thoughtful, I would disagree that the "plowman is an artist." If the machinery technolgoy that exists today had been around 150 years ago, John Deere would have had no reason to invent the self scouring steel moleboard plow. Soil left undisturbed will allow earthwomrs to proliferate and in conjunction with decaying roots from previous crops, better water infilatration will occur. With an average soil loss of 9 tons per acre, I find it hard to promote an activity that adds to this loss of an irreplaceable resource. The Lancaster County Conservation District did a survey last fall asking people to indicate what were "local natural resource concerns." The top two were: water quality and soil erosion. The "no-tillage" method of planting would go a long way in solving these apparent problems.

Now Is The Time

To Know Public Perception of Farmers

A recent survey conducted by Doane Marketing Research, revealed the general public views farmers positively.

Eighty four percent of the United States' adult population believes that farmers make a great contribution to society.

Nearly 70 percent of the general public credits farmers with preserving the quality of the United States food supply. A strong majority of the population thinks farmers provide this quality food supply at a fair price.

More than 80 percent of the people identified farmers as the most important members of society involved in preserving the land and environment. Most Americans recognized farmers as the true guardians of our natural resources.

Finally the survey showed that 75 percent of the public believes that farming is a difficult job.

Farmers should take pride in their contribution to the nation's well being. This survey strongly indicates that the general public appreciates farmers.

However, farmers will have to increase their public relations efforts to balance the headlines often received by vocal minority special interest groups.

To Check Your Generator

As a result of last week's article on electrical fires in poultry houses, I had a farmer call me this week to report that your generator could be another source for a fire.

In the past year there have been three fires in confinement animal housing units that were started from the generator exhaust pipe.

The most recent was caused when the farmer test ran his generator for 30 minutes. The resulting heat from the exhaust pipe caused the fire.

Check the installation of your generator, especially the exhaust pipe, to make sure it is not a potential fire source.

It would be a good idea to at least once-a-month check your electrical wiring and equipment for condensation, corrosion, broken insulation, etc.

You might want to work with your insurance agent in doing a fire prevention audit.

According to the state fire marshal office, most farm building fires are caused by the electrical system. Reduce the risk of a fire by doing regularly schedule inspections.

To Look At Farm Finances

Dr. David Kohl, Virginia Tech, at a recent meeting gave some guidelines about farm financial management.

He identified the following as some keys to success:

1. Control costs.
2. Maintain low overhead.
3. Manage labor including family labor.
4. Manage growth.
5. Need $150,000 to $250,000 gross revenue for each family or $40,000 to $70,000 net income per family.
6. Net income needs to be two times employee wages. and
7. Control family living expenses.

He identified three levels of annual family living expenses: frugal, $12,000 to $18,000 (20 per cent); moderate, $18,000 to $30,000 (60 per cent); and heavy, $50,000 to $100,000 (20 per cent).

LIFE WITHOUT HOPE?

LIFE WITHOUT HOPE?
March 30, 1997

Background Scripture:
II Thessalonians 3
Devotional Reading:
Ephesians 4:25-32

In the morning newspaper there was a cartoon, "Rose Is A Rose," by Pat Brady. In the first frame, Rose's husband looks away from his morning newspaper and sees that Rose is staring bug-eyed. "Anything wrong?" he asks. And, still bug-eyed, she replies in the next frame, "For the first time in my life I'm struck by the sudden awareness that I'm not going to live forever!" In frame three her husband begins to say "Heck, Honey, none of us is going to live fo. . .." In frame four, his sentence unfinished, the husband now is also staring bug-eyed!

We may not stare bug-eyed when it happens, but every once in a while most of us are reminded of the chilling threat of our human mortality. And if we let this thought get past the front gates of our minds, it can be a thought-stopping realization. Human history tells us that without exception we all die. We see death every day — in our newspapers, on television and sometimes in our own neighborhoods — but still this inevitable experience for most of us is almost incomprehensible. We have seen it erase the presence of friends and relatives. But, it is hard for us to imagine a day when we will no longer have any consciousness.

But it is in moments such as these, when we contemplate the meaning of death, that Paul's words in I Thes. 4 strike such a responsive chord in us? "But we would not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning those who are asleep, that you may not grieve as others do who have no hope" (4:13).

SARDONIC JOKE?

Without a hope of life beyond death, our existence becomes a sardonic joke played upon human kind. As a British psychiatrist once observed, life then becomes no more than "a sexually transmitted disease with a 100 percent mortality rate."

What is the use of learning and growing in this life if I cannot carry it into some other existence? If death is really the end of consciousness, why should I not join the atheist in proclaiming: "Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die"? If, on the other side of the grave there is nothingness, why not, on this side, squeeze out of life every last drop — regardless of what and whom it costs? I agree with theologian John Cobb, who says, "Personal existence can matter ultimately only if it matters everlastingly."

The Christian Church came into being proclaiming that life does matter everlastingly. The angel in Matthew 28 says, "Do not be afraid; for I know that you seek Jesus who was crucified. He is not here; for he has risen, as he said." (28:5,6). The Christian hope begins with the resurrection of Jesus.

VICTORIOUS!

From the four gospels it is impossible to discern just how Jesus was resurrected. Did he appear as a physical body, a spiritual body, an apparition, a vision or something else? We cannot know, but all of these resurrection experiences unite in telling us that the Jesus they knew in life is not defeated by death and is still a reality they can experience.

But the Easter message of the Christian Church goes beyond the belief that Christ is risen. To the Thessalonians Paul writes: "For since we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so, through Jesus, God will bring with him those who have fallen asleep" (4:14).

And this hope of our own immortality beyond the grave has a profound effect upon our lives on this side of the grave. As Dag Hammarskjold put it, "No choice is uninfluenced by the way in which personality regards its destiny and the body its death. In the last analysis, it is our conception of death which decides our answers to all the questions that life puts to us."

So, it is in our hope of a victorious life beyond death that makes possible a victorious life before death.

N.Y., N.J. Milk $12.70

ALBANY, N.Y. — Dairy farmers who supplied regulated milk dealers (handlers) under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders during February 1997 will be paid by handlers on the basis of a uniform price of $12.70 per hundredweight (27.3 cents per quart); the price for the corresponding month last year was $13.59 per hundredweight.

Market Administrator Ronald C. Pearce also stated that the price was $12.65 in January 1997. The uniform price is a marketwide weighted average of the value of farm milk used for fluid and manufactured dairy products.

February's uniform price was lowered 3 cents per hundredweight by a refund payment of $267,924.20 to Sani-Dairy, in trust, for redistribution to the producer plaintiffs. The payment from the Producer Settlement Fund was ordered by the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania in Sani-Dairy et al. v. Yeutter.

A total of 10,220 dairy farmers supplied handlers regulated under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders with 882,337,687 pounds of milk during February 1997. This was a decrease of 8.5 percent (about 82 million pounds) from last year. When adjusted for the extra day in February 1996, the actual decrease is 5.2 percent.

The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $113,823,068.64. This included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not premiums, deductions authorized by the farmer, or assessments.

Regulated handlers used 351,515,816 pounds of milk for Class I, 39.8 percent of the total. This milk is used for fluid milk products such as homogenized, flavored, low test, and skim milks. For February 1997 handlers paid $13.76 per hundredweight (29.6 cents per quart) for Class I milk compared with $15.33 a year ago.

Handlers used 139,869,789 pounds of milk for Class II products, 15.8 percent of the total. Class II products include fluid cream, eggnog, ricotta and cottage cheeses, ice cream, and yogurt. Handlers paid $11.64 per hundredweight for this milk.

Milk used to manufacture Class III products including butter, cheese (other than ricotta and cottage cheeses), and whole milk powder totaled 369,289,315 pounds (41.9 percent of the total). Handlers paid $12.48 per hundredweight for this milk.

Milk used to manufacture nonfat dry milk (Class III-A) totaled 21,672,767 pounds (2.5 percent of the total). Handlers paid $12.38 per hundredweight for this milk.

AND LEVELS THE GROUND

The WR5 Rock Windrower employs a side delivery frame arrangement which allows the operator to better control the size of windrows, regardless of rock conditions. The windrower's PATENTED pivoting drum arrangement allows the wheels to be placed closer to the windrower drum, resulting in excellent ground following characteristics.

Pennsylvania Jersey Convention Set

LIBERTY (Tioga Co.) — Spring has sprung in Pennsylvania and that means it's time for Pennsylvania Jersey breeders to head to Schuylkill County for the 1997 Pennsylvania Jersey Convention.

Scheduled for Friday, April 18 and Saturday, April 19, at the River Inn in Pottsville, the annual gathering will allow young and old to share their experiences with Jerseys, watch as a new Jersey Queen in crowned, applaud for many award recipients and bid on one of many top notch consignments for the annual spring sale.

The festivities kick off at 6:00 Friday night with a social hour followed by the youth awards banquet. During the evening program, Pennsylvania will crown a new queen and will distribute youth achievement awards, production awards and scholarships.

While at the banquet, Jersey enthusiasts will feast on a choice of Roast Turkey with dressing or Ham Hawaiian. Both meals are $12 per person (children under 10, $6 each).

On Saturday morning at 8:00, breakfast will be served at the hotel at a cost of $6 per person.

After the breakfast, the 1997 annual meeting will convene with president Don Stonerook at the helm.

The featured speaker for the morning program is Calvin Covington, executive secretary of the American Jersey Cattle Association, who will speak on milk pricing.

The Distinguished Service award will also be presented at this time to Jersey breeders who have dedicated much of their lives promoting and improving the Jersey breed.

Following a pre-sale meal at Meadowview Farm, Pine Grove, PA, the Pennsylvania Spring Jersey cattle sale is sure to draw some attention as consignments from across the nation are led across the auction block.

Starting at noon, the sale features consignments from Pennsylvania and across the nation sired by Khan, Bold Daniel, Berretta, Barber, Alf and many others.

Included in the sale are heifers with flush potential, choice of flushes and many herd building heifers ready to freshen.

Also offered at the sale will be several Pot of Gold calves for the younger crowd. Twenty-five percent of the gross from the sale of these animals will be set aside in a Pot of Gold fund to be distributed in the year 2000. The owner of the calf which made the highest production record on her first lactation wins part of the "Pot of Gold" as do the second and third place winners. All official rules and regulations which must be followed to be eligible to win are printed in the 1997 PJCA spring sale catalog.

Be sure to make your reservations soon to take part in this action-packed weekend.

For more information about the sale, contact Jersey Marketing Service at (614) 861-3636; Craig Rhein at (717) 345-3383; or the Dreisbachs at (610) 562-3966.

Leaving Dairy Business? Consider The Tax Effects Before Selling The Cows

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — It's a Pennsylvania farm family's nightmare. After 20 years in the dairy business, unfortunate circumstances and economic forces have left a family of four $125,000 in debt. The family decides to quit dairying, sell the cows and equipment to pay off the debt, and combine an off-farm job with crops and beef cattle.

They sell 100 raised cows and replacements for $97,500 and dairy equipment for $27,500 in May, and both husband and wife take jobs in town. Both salaries total $35,000 for the period of June through December. The salary money is used for family living and to catch up on education expenses for two teen-age children, so none is available for debt payment.

The ax falls when they have their tax return prepared the next April. "When the tax return is complete, the family finds they have a total income tax bill of almost $34,000, plus nearly $1,000 self-employment tax from the sale of calves and other items," says Dr. Larry Jenkins, associate professor of agricultural economics at Penn State.

"Withholdings on wage income cover about $2,700 of the tax, but there is an outstanding balance of about $31,000 due on April 15. The family has to take out a new loan just to pay the tax."

What happened? "The money from the sale of their dairy cattle is all taxable," explains Jenkins. "The cattle were all raised, so there is no basis to offset sale price. The remaining basis in the equipment is $10,000, but there are recaptures on the gain from the equipment sale because the family took depreciation deductions over the past three yeras. The $17,500 gain on the equipment is taxed as ordinary income."

The family nightmare is that the earning assets — the cows and the dairy equipment — have been sold, but now a new debt that is nearly a fourth of the original one appears because of the taxes related to the sale of assets to pay the original debt.

Jenkins says that a few options can alleviate the tax burden of a farm liquidation, but most people fail to take advantage of them because they sell assets first and talk to their accountant later. "That process should be reversed," he says. "Talk to the accountant first, and sell assets later based on the accountant's analysis of the tax result and ways to reduce the tax bite."

Many people think that there is no income tax to pay when a farmer sells assets and uses the proceeds to pay off a large debt. "In perfectly logical thinking that individual has no money because it was used to pay debt," Jenkins says. "Unfortunately, the Internal Revenue Service doesn't agree. That agency views a sale as a sale, unless the money is donated to charity. To the IRS, if there is a sale and resulting gain, tax is due even if the income was all used for debt payment."

What are some ways to reduce the tax burden that can result from quitting dairying? "If possible, spread the liquidation over two tax years to keep the income in a lower bracket," Jenkins says. "For instance, if mature animals can be sold one year and replacements the next year, it will prevent the surge in taxable income that results from selling everything in one year. In some cases, livestock and equipment can be sold in different years to achieve a similar result."

If the lender agrees, an installment sale might be used to spread income over several years. "This will keep more of the income in a lower tax bracket, and it should produce some interest income on the unpaid balance that can be used to offset interest payments on loan obligations," Jenkins says.

If two or more families are involved in the farm operation, be sure asset sales are properly divided so that income is reported on the correct tax return. "This can divide the total sale proceeds so that each family pays tax in the lowest tax bracket possible," Jenkins says.

Sales that will be subject to self-employment tax should be carefully reviewed so they don't overburden a single taxpayer. "Self-employment tax on sales reported on schedule 'F' often prove to be a bigger burden than income tax," Jenkins notes.

If the farming operation will be continued with a change in enterprises, consider exchanging some assets for property that will be needed in the new farming operation. "For example, a family quitting dairy farming but planning on a beef operation might consider an exchange of dairy breeding animals for beef breeding animals," Jenkins says. "This 'like-kind' exchange is accomplished tax-free — that is, no gain is recognized and no tax is due, as long as there is no transfer of cash and the property given up has the same value as the property received."

The rules on "like-kind" exchanges are complex, so be sure to check with a competent tax accountant about the specific exchange being considered. "Some exchanges do not qualify," Jenkins notes. "For instance, you cannot exchange dairy cows for beef or dairy steers, because they are not considered 'like-kind' property."

Dairy operators who have experienced a net operating loss during recent years may be able to use the operating loss to offset part of the gain from liquidating the dairy herd and equipment. "A net operating loss occurs when operating expenses for a year exceed operating revenue," Jenkins says. "Typically, the loss is carried back for up to three years and used to get a refund of income tax previously paid in one or more of the prior three years."

In some cases, income tax was not paid in the three-year carryback period, and that makes it possible to carry-forward the operating loss for up to 15 years into the future. "When the carry-forward option is chosen, it is necessary to include a statement with the tax return for the year of the operating loss indicating that the loss is being carried forward rather than carried back," Jenkins says.

The process of preparing the loss carry-forward statement and including it with the tax return is the responsibility of the tax accountant who prepares the tax return for the year of the operating loss. "However, if an operating loss occurs, the farm manager should be sure to remind their tax accountant to either carry-back or carry-forward the loss so it can be used to secure an income-tax benefit," Jenkins says.

If you're seriously considering quitting dairy farming and beginning a beef cattle operation, Jenkins urges you to check the records for historical farm profits earned by Pennsylvania beef cattle operations. "Do that before you invest in a group of beef cows, unless you have a really good job in town," he warns.

USDA Announces EQIP Funding

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has allocated $3.4 million to Pennsylvania to implement the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP), according to William Baumgartner, state executive director of the Farm Service Agency (FSA).

This new program was authorized by the 1996 Farm Bill and replaces the Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) that has been so successful for the last 60 years. In 1996, Pennsylvania received $1.6 million in ACP funds and $2.2 million for an Interim EQIP.

EQIP is a voluntary program providing cost-share assistance to agricultural producers who install needed conservation practices on their land. Conservation practices are available to assist farmers with soil erosion control, water quality improvement, wildlife habitat enhancement and forestry. The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) and County Conservation Districts in Pennsylvania will provide technical and educational assistance to farmers who perform conservation practices according to a farm plan.

USDA in Pennsylvania is required to submit a plan to the National Office in Washington, D.C. outlining how EQIP funds will be utilitized in the state. Cost-share funds will be made available to designated conservation priority areas in Pennsylvania and for identified resource concerns outside of priority areas. When the state plan is approved by USDA, EQIP funds will be allocated to county FSA committees for cost-sharing with farmers.

Farmers may participate in EQIP by signing a long-term contract for five to 10 years to carry out needed conservation practices. Most conservation practices that were available under ACP will continue to be available under EQIP.

A sign-up period will be announced in the near future. However, applications may be accepted at any time. Contact your local FSA office for more information about EQIP and how to apply for this new program.

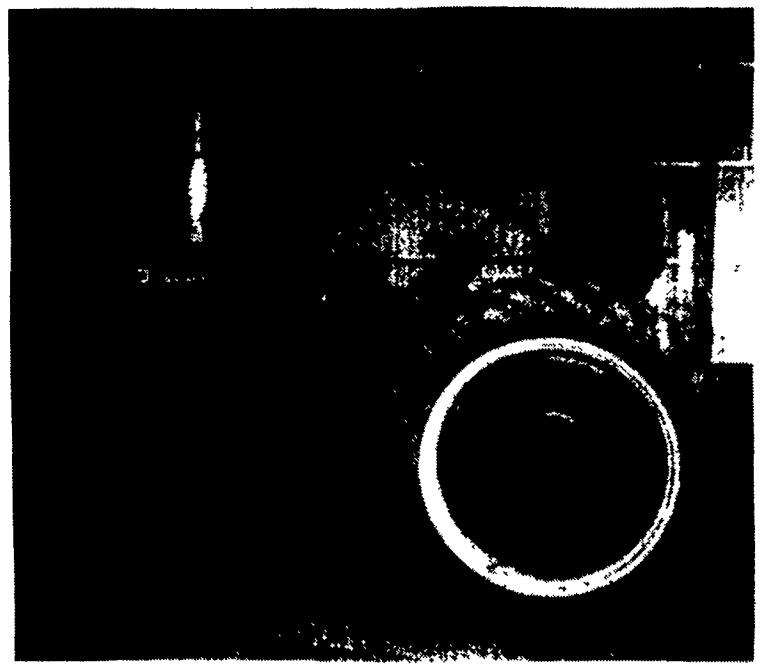
Mehrle has an extensive farm shop.



The first tractor Mehrle owned was this 1953 Farmall Super C. He plans to give it to his grandson, Jacob.

cows, a number they plan on maintaining. "We can't increase our herd size without making some major changes to the facilities, and I just don't see that happening," Ramsburg explained. Approximately 50 percent of the herd is purebred, he estimated.

When he took over the farm from his father in '61, milk production averaged 12,000 to 13,000 pounds. Now, with cows in a drylot situation being fed a TMR consisting of corn silage, alfalfa haylage, ground high moisture ear corn, brewer's grain, soybean, and mineral supplement, production hovers at around 19,000 pounds of milk with 700 of fat.

Heifers and dry cows are also fed in a drylot. Since he is not marketing cattle, Ramsburg's breeding program utilizes strictly young sires. Heat detectors are used, and calving interval on the farm averages 13 months.

While Mehrle manages the farm, his wife Thelma is responsible for all aspects of calf care. One daughter, Mary Jane Roop, helps milk and handles the payroll; two other daughters, Virginia Crist and Judy Ramsburg, are not currently involved in the farming operation. A fourth daughter, Barbara, passed away in 1991. The couple has 4 grandchildren: Whitney Diane Crist, and Julie Anna, Lauren, and Jacob Roop. The Ramsburgs also employ five full-time and 2 part-time helpers.

Cows are milked in a double eight herringbone parlor with automatic takeoffs. A 3-inch milkline takes the milk to a 3,000-gallon Dari-Kool bulk tank. It takes about three and one-half hours to milk the herd, which is split into a high and a low group. Cows are pre and post dipped. Somatic cell count for the Brookfield Farms cows ranges between 100,00-120,000. They have received the lowest SCC award for DHIA for the last two years, and quality premium awards for the last six years from MD-VA Milk Producers for low bacteria, PI count, SCC, and antibiotic levels, and for no additives to milk. Ramsburg credits these excellent numbers in part to his confinement facilities. "It's when the cows are out in the pasture lying around in manure when you run into trouble," the dairyman said. Freestalls are bedded with sand, which is added once a month, and raked daily.

Six trench silos, constructed between 1979 and 1990, store corn silage, grass haylage, and high moisture ground ear corn. The only commodity purchased is soybean as a supplement for the TMR. A manure pit was installed in 1979, providing storage for 200 cows for 60 days. "We spread it when we can, and we like to incorporate it right away," said Ramsburg.

The home farm consists of 275 acres, with another 500 rented. Ramsburg grows about 100 acres of alfalfa. For the last two years, he has gotten five cuttings off of it. There are 375 acres of corn (silage and ground high moisture ear corn), and 80 acres of barley double cropped into late corn. The balance of the acreage is in grass hay and pasture for the heifers.

Mehrle still has the first tractor he ever purchased: a 1953 Farmall Super C he bought in 1956. He has restored it and uses it, but the proud grandfather says it will be 5-year-old Jacob's tractor when he's ready for it. In addition to the Super C, over time he has invested in a full line of Internationals, including a 1955 300, a 1959 340, a 1965 706, a 1972 1066, a 1983 5088, a 1985 86 Hydro, and a 1995 Case IH 7220. He uses a 1990 Ford 276 Bidirectional tractor loader to fill the bunker silos.

Some of the tractors have been modified so Mr. Ramsburg can operate them more safely and efficiently following the loss of his arm. His sleeve was caught in the PTO shaft as he was unloading ground ear corn on December 15, 1989. After the accident, "I was just laying there thinking, what am I going to do? I could take the left lane, and do nothing, or I could choose the rightlane, and manage and keep active in the farming operation. And it wasn't a hard decision," said the dairy farmer. "Now I have to be careful because I don't have good balance," he explained. Special steps and a platform have been welded onto the 706 and the loader tractor that help Mr. Ramsburg climb in and dismount more safely. And spinners have been added to the steering wheels of the trucks and the tractors. "I decided when I was laying in the hospital to get two-way radios so I could keep in touch with them and they could keep in touch with me," Mr. Ramsburg explained.

It is that kind of thoughtful determination that has led Mr. Ramsburg to excel in farming. He was recently recognized by Pennsylvania Farmer magazine and the Penn State Cooperative Extension Service as a Master Farmer. The Ramsburg family was honored in 1986 as Frederick County Farm Family of the Year. Over the years Mr. Ramsburg has been honored with the FFA American Farmer degree, the MD 4-H All-Star award, and the Outstanding Young Farmer award for Frederick County given by the Jaycees. He has been director of the county Farm Bureau, and director and officer of the Frederick County and Mid-East DHIA. He is a dairy representative on the MD Ag Commission, a director of MD-VA Milk Producers Co-op, vice president of the Thurmont Co-op, a director of Central MD Farm Credit, and vice president of the Dairy Council of Greater Metropolitan Washington. He also serves on the American Farm Bureau Federation's dairy advisory committee, and is active in the county Farm Safety Camp for Kids. The family is also active in the Glade United Church of Christ.

Mehrle's reflection can be seen in the 3000 gallon milk tank.

A special landing and steps have been welded onto this tractor to allow Mehrle to get in and out more easily. Spinners have also been added to all steering wheels, and each tractor and truck is equipped with a two-way radio for safety.

Brosius Outlines Position On Agriculture Research

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The past several years have seen an erosion of public support for agricultural research. While private contributions to the research effort have been on the increase, federal support has been eroded by some 20 to 30 percent during the past five years," said Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Charles C. Brosius.

"This is a trend that must be stopped. Food and fiber are essential to all people, and we must ensure our productive capacity is secure."

In testimony late last week before the U.S. Senate Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry Committee on the reauthorization of agricultural research, Brosius said that the 1996 Farm Bill began the process of fundamental change in agriculture. He said the seven-year phase-down of commodity programs increases the need for greater global competitiveness on agriculture.

"This situation increases the demand for sound, progressive agricultural research," Brosius said, adding that "in the past, public investments in agriculture research have paid large dividends to society, and the global, high-tech, environmentally sensitive era we have now entered requires support of public research."

Brosius, a member of the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture (NASDA) Agricultural Research Task Force, told the Committee that the nation's land grant universities must remain a strategic resource for agriculture and the general public.

"Publicly funded research is needed to ensure society's goals are achieved. While private and public research are complementary, private research is more narrow and short term. Public research can be more speculative, broader and longer term. Public funding ensures that needs voiced by concerned citizens are achieved. Items such as a safe and secure food and fiber system, a healthy and well-nourished population, harmony between agriculture and the environment, global competitiveness, and general economic development can be addressed with public funding. All of these factors help provide the quality of life desired by each of our citizens," he stated.

According to Brosius' statement, NASDA believes legislation reauthorizing agriculture research and education programs

THE BIGGEST THING TO HIT DAIRY SCIENCE SINCE AUTOMATION

Cargill Testing New FullTime™ Forage With Leading U.S. Dairy Operators

Proudcers Report Increases Of 3 to 11.5 Pounds!!!

On farms across the dairy crescent, an unprecedented feed test is underway to evaluate FullTime forage, a plant breeding breakthrough from Cargill Hybrid Seeds. The results from 90-day trials on more than 100 farms could forecast a revolution in dairy nutrition. Adding $125 or more per cow per lactation, as FullTime forage is expected to do, would have a dramatic effect on the bottom line of any operation. Early observations from cooperating dairy producers suggest that FullTime forage has a very promising future.

OPERATORS PLEASED WITH DAIRY HERD PERFORMANCE ON FULLTIME FORAGE

Max Smith, Martinsburg, PA

"We've seen milk production go up about three pounds per head per day with 160 cows and feed costs drop by about five cents per head per day with FullTime Forage. Dry matter intake from forage increased nearly five lbs. per day. Getting more total forage into the cow has to be good for her. It maintains body condition and we have to look at that.

Dave Fredericks, Fort Plain, N.Y.

"Our milk production went up seven pounds per cow per day. What I really liked about FullTime forage was being able to back off on purchased grain - we cut that about 150 pounds per day.

"Using FullTime forage reduced feed costs by $21 or $22 per day. If I plant it on all my acres next year, I probably could use even less high-moisture corn, feed more forage and less grain, and see even bigger savings on feed costs."

John Schaendorf, Allegan, Mich

"We were looking for increased dry matter intake, improved body condition, increased milk production and lower feed costs. We gained on all four. We gained between seven and 10 pounds per cow per day. We gained .43 points on body condition and saw a 10 percent increase in dry matter intake."

Jacob Tanis, Centre Hall, PA

"We estimate an average daily increase in milk of four pounds with an increase of dry matter intake, as well. The bullk tank kept running over when we started feeding FullTime Forage. Production jumped from 85 pounds to 92 pounds from the same 85 cows. And for silage hybrids, there's never been anything as good as Cargill numbers."

Bruce Hemserth, Millville, PA

"We think we'll see a six-pound average increase when we get the DHIA analysis. We started at 60 pounds and hit 66 or 67 pounds per cow per day with no change in butterfat. Milk production bumped up right away and gradually peaked over the first month we had FullTime on test. I've ordered FullTime seed for 1997."

Ervin Hostetler, Belleville, Penn

"My average daily milk production increased from 62.5 to 71.2 pounds per cow by the end of the 30-day trial, according to my DHIA results. There were 68 cows in the trial, although we were feeding for 62 or 63 cows. Butterfat was consistent throughout the trial.

Dry matter intake increased 3.5 lbs. per cow per day. The cost for a total mixed ration went up 29 cents per cow per day, but the return from increased milk production was $1.22 per cow per day."

Huge Waterway Stops Erosion At Shelmire Conservation Farm

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUAKERTOWN (Bucks Co.) — Before 1989, Paul Shelmire Jr. remembers what the home farm would be like after a heavy rain.

He shrugs when he thinks about it: gulleys of erosion on the field . . . water almost knee high coming up just behind the farm buildings . . . worries about how much fertile, productive topsoil would be lost to severe rainstorms. . . .

Paul knew something had to be done. In 1989, with the help of the conservation district and then-Soil Conservation Service (now called the Natural Resource Conservation Service or NRCS), a three-year project was born.

The project involved the installation of an underground tiling system to divert the massive rainfall to a waterway that runs through the farm and alongside the farm buildings to a forested region.

The three-year project was finished in 1991. After it was complete, more than 14,000 feet of waterway took the water, primarily from the hillside springs, and diverted it off the farm to a small stream which feeds into the Unami Creek. The Unami subsequently feeds into the Perkiomen.

Shelmire said the waterway "takes the water right out of here," measuring three foot deep and 40-feet wide. "The water used to flood terribly, but the district came in and helped fix it," he noted.

As a result, there are no more "gullywashers" in the field. The soil stays intact.

Nearly 20 years of efforts to conserve soil paid off handsomely in February for the Shelmire Family, who won the Bucks County Conservation Farmer of the Year honor at the district banquet.

The Shelmires farm more than 1,000 acres near Quakertown, of which more than 600 are rented. Included in the operation are the father, Paul Shelmire Jr. with wife Eva and two sons, Paul Shelmire III and Larry.

It's no small task to remain productive and profitable while surrounded by housing development and the Upper Bucks Airport. With the challenges of moving heavy equipment and working to keep the farm profitable, work to preserve the soil has garnered the Shelmire family district recognition.

Paul Shelmire Jr. said that after several years of renting farms from the 1930s to the 1940s, his father, Paul Sr., purchased the home farm in February 1946. The farm consisted at the time of 46 milking cows, but also had hogs and chickens and the operators managed custom work. In 1955, Paul Jr. married Eva, and "one month later we sold the cows," he said.

At the same time the Shelmires began hauling livestock out of the Midwest to producers in the area — they hauled steers, sheep, and hogs. After Paul Jr.'s brother, Donald, died in 1962, the farm operation was cut back. It then became a beef and hog operation until 1990, when the livestock operation was discontinued and the farm remained crops and vegetables.

The Shelmires became conservation cooperators in 1979, according to Ed Brzostek, district conservation for the NRCS. Since then, the Shelmires have completed more than 14,000 feet of waterways and diversions to control soil erosion. In addition, 20,000 feet of subsurface drainage was used in conjunction with the waterways and diversions to properly maintain vegetative channels.

The Shelmires also constructed a 1,400-foot long storage terrace with precise grading. Eight water control basins have been built mostly at the head of waterways to control and slow water velocities and keep uphill seepage from saturating the waterways. Also, there is about 4,000 feet of underground pipe outlet.

On the farm, according to the district, Paul Shelmire Jr. laid out his own contour strips on the farm to control soil erosion before any conservation agents came to the farm. According to Brzostek, the first conservation agent, Wylie McFarland, told Paul that he couldn't have laid out some of the stripcropping any better himself.

About 99 percent of the fields farmed by the Shelmires are under minimum tillage, according to Brzostek. Larry said the minimum tillage includes a disc-chisel and a mulch tiller and finisher.

More than 100 acres are stripcropped. Hay is grown extensively in rotation with field crops to provide a good conservation cropping system. The mulch hay operation includes about 350 acres, mostlyl Timothy, and a lot of small bales of hay are made —

Larry, center, said the minimum tillage includes a disc-chisel and a mulch tiller and finisher. Back left is Paul Jr., and at far right is Paul III. The three-year project was finished in 1991. After it was complete, more than 14,000 feet of waterway took the water, primarily from the hillside springs, and diverted it off the farm to a small stream which feeds into the Unami Creek. The Unami subsequently feeds into the Perkiomen. Here Larry inspects the outlet.

Paul III, right and Larry took an early interest in agriculture and joined FFA. They were the only two FFA members in Bucks County to receive FFA's highest honor, the American Farmer Award, given to less than two out of 1,000 FFA members nationwide.

Editor Wins Photojournalism Award

LANCASTER FARMING'S editor, Everett Newswanger, received an award of excellence for the best photojournalism general farm story in the Northeast Farm Communicator Association's annual Nor'Eastern contest. This award was announced at the winter meeting held in mid-March in Brattleboro, Vermont.

Newswanger's winning entry in the photojournalism class was entitled "Pennsylvania Mule Day Complete With 20-Team Hitch, and appeared in the March 2, 1996, issue. Taken at the Henry Kauffman farm, located south of Nine Points in Lancaster County, the lead photograph was on page 1, and a two-page spread of mules and farmers ran inside.

A group of peer judges called the work excellent and gave most impressive aspect honors to, "over-all attitude, point of view, friendly, appreciative, and also some great shots."

The mule event was sponsored by Malcolm Jessup and Jack Strode, mule trainers from Woodbury, Tennessee. These dealers bring their mules to southeastern Pennsylvania for the Amish to buy for work teams on their farms.

As a side note, Jessup and Strode have made a video that shows how they train the mules, and it is available by calling Jessup at (615)563-5812.

more than 40,000 small square bales and more than 1,000 large square bales per year. They grow about 120-125 acres of Timothy and about 20 acres of alfalfa.

According to Paul III, produce grown at the farm includes about 25 acres of sweet corn, 15 acres of pumpkins, and other items. The Shelmires also contract additional farmers in the area to grow wholesale produce, including additional sweet corn, tomatoes, peppers, cantaloupes, watermelon, and other crops for "different clientele," he said.

One of the biggest challenges the Shelmires faced was back in 1978, when Paul Jr. purchased a new farm and a hedgerow had to be removed and conservation strips were installed. Also, a 1,500-foot waterway was installed and diversions were put in.

Now, keeping the right rotation of the strips near the large waterway on the main farm is important. Brzostek indicated that the shaley, clay soil does not absorb water readily and much of it pools and washes down — causing real conservation headaches.

Unlike another farm the Shelmires operate in Coopersburg, with flint stone soil, diversions are a mainstay at the home farm. One farm has a 1,400-foot long storage terrace (a pipe outlet terrace) to help control the water.

Most of the equipment used at the farm measures 24-26 feet across. The more acreage they handle, the more efficiency is needed.

"Time is money," said Paul III. He noted that if it will take just as long, it is better to use a 24-foot piece of equipment rather than a simple 10-foot item.

Paul III and Larry took an early interest in agriculture and joined FFA. They were the only two FFA members in Bucks County to receive FFA's highest honor, the American Farmer Award, given to less than two out of 1,000 FFA members nationwide, according to Paul III.

Larry said that winning the award is good because it shows the rewards of being a "good steward of the land."

Paul Jr. said, "If you take care of the land, it will take care of you. That's the truth."

New Life For Old Barns

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Old barns can be rehabilitated to meet the needs of a modern farming operation while preserving symbols of Ohio's agricultural past.

Farm consolidations and shifts in agricultural practices have left many of Ohio's barns abandoned or underused. But many of these buildings can be remodeled to meet today's needs at a feasible price, say officials with a barn restoration program co-sponsored by Ohio State University Extension and the Ohio Historical Society.

Typically, an old building is renovated for about 25 percent to 50 percent of what it would cost to replace it with a new structure, said Mike Woodford of Woodford Brothers Inc., a business near Syracuse, N.Y., that restores old barns. And, owners won't be taxed for a new building.

"People have this concept that it will cost a lot of money to have their old barn redone, when it is usually pretty reasonable," Woodford said.

Most barns are preserved for their original intent — hay, livestock or small equipment storage — but others are remodeled to perform new or slightly different tasks. Doors can be expanded, floors reinforced and restrictive beams removed so large, modern equipment can be stored, Woodford said.

Barns also can be updated with concrete floors, farrowing pens and square bale storage converted to large round bale storage, or renovated for such diverse projects as selling Christmas trees or growing mushrooms.

Woodford will share his rehabilitation experiences and techniques at "Barn Again! In Ohio" workshops in Shelby County, April 4-5, and Belmont County, April 5 and 12. Other presenters will discuss the history and heritage of Ohio's barns, the economic incentives of restoration and additional rehabilitation methods.

"People are starting to realize that there are only so many old barns left, and in another 20 years an old barn will really be something special," Woodford said.

Woodford Brothers has been restoring barns for about 22 years and currently works on about 250 buildings annually, he said. The firm specializes in structural repairs such as restoring or building new foundations, repairing or replacing beams and using cables to straighten and secure buildings.

"Our customers are typical, everyday people who aren't repairing old barns as an extravagant way to spend money, but as a well thought-out, practical way to make old barns useful again," he said.

"Barn Again! In Ohio" can give farmers and concerned citizens the guidance and technical information needed to repair and reuse older farm buildings and rural structures, said Jim Papritan, Ohio State University agricultural engineer and co-coordinator of the project that began in 1995.

The workshops provide a blend of historical background and alternative uses for barns. A day of touring looks at barn rehabilitation efforts by families who have repaired barns and the contractors and consultants who actually did the work, Papritan said.

Many people are looking for informed ideas of what to do with old barns, and "Barn Again! In Ohio" offers alternatives to demolition, said Steve Gordon, survey manager for the Ohio Historic Preservation Office, a division of the Ohio Historical Society, and the rehabilitation program's other coordinator. About 275 people — both farmers and nonfarmers who own land with a barn — attended workshops last year.

Some of Ohio's old barns are historically significant because of the family that built them or because of a function the barns served that reflect a certain population or ethnic group. For example, a barn in Monroe County built by a French family before 1870 has a distinctive framing technique, Gordon said.

"Typically when groups settled an area, they brought farming practices with them, and barns reflect those agricultural practices," he said. "The materials the barns are made of also reflect what was available in the area at the time the barn was built."

There are potentially significant tax incentives in Ohio for people restoring old, historic barns, but they require form preparation and a review process, Gordon said.

The Shelby County workshop, in Sidney, will have presentations on Friday, April 4, and tours of barn restoration projects in west central Ohio on Saturday, April 5. Registration is $35 per person for the workshop, reference materials and lunch, or $20 without reference materials. Registration is limited to the first 80 people and must be mailed by March 21. Fayette Holds Farm-City Recognition Banquet

DAVID HIEBERT
Westmoreland Co. Correspondent

UNIONTOWN (Fayette Co.) — In a recognition banquet here March 13, organizers of the Fayette Farm-City Day announced the hosts and date for the 1997 event.

Hosts for the Sept. 13 event, will be the Randy and Kim Brown dairy, Acme.

Janice Derr, chair of the organizing committee, stated that the purpose of the Farm-City Day is to "show off Fayette County agriculture." And the county has a significant base of over 900 farms to show off.

She further said that the event aims to provide opportunity for interaction between urban residents and farm people.

With rural residents accounting for only 7 percent of the population, continual education needs to happen for urban people to appreciate the contribution agriculture makes to their lives.

The program featured a slide show of the previous Farm-City Day held in 1994 on the James Poorbaugh family dairy. Depicted in the slides were events such as the kiddy tractor pull and ice cream eating contests.

In showing the adult education taking place, the slides reminded attendees that such everyday practices such as soil conservation, crop management, and milking may be unfamiliar to non-farm people.

Narrated by Anna Sarver, Fayette/Green Farm Service agent, the slides gave her opportunity to point out that a significant part of the learning happens for people as they actually touch agriculture as in a petting zoo. "Hands on touching means so much more to people," she said.

Other parts of the 1994 Day, as shown in the slides, included exhibits by agri-business, machinery and antique displays. Also, free pony rides, wool spinning, and face painting made the day a family kind of event.

The 1997 farm host Randy Brown was accompanied to the recognition dinner by his father, Wayne, and sons, Ben (age 12) and Tom (10). Other family members who get involved with the farm include Randy's wife, Kim (who needed to stay on the farm to keep up the 3-times-a-day milking schedule), daughters Stephanie (15), and Sandra (14); and a brother.

Though the land has been in the Brown family since 1838, Randy has been dairying in the present location since 1979. The operation consists of about 350 acres of land, owned by the family.

In addition, they rent about 150 acres. Their dairy herd consists of about 95 milking stock and 70 young head.

Serving with chair person Janice Derr on the 1997 committee are: Don Fretz, treasurer; Sharon Clay and Joyce Fourth, co-secretaries. The committee is seeking additional volunteers to take on specific organizing tasks for the fall event. Contact the county agriculture service at 412-438-0111 or any committee member to volunteer.

Also recognized at the event were previous Farm-City Day hosts:

- 1989 William Jackson family
- 1990 William and Joyce Faith
- 1991 Bob and Joy Jackson
- 1992 Albert and Mary Farrens
- 1993 Adam and Janice Derr and
- 1994 James Poorbaugh family.

The Poorbaughs received a special plaque to commemorate their participation in the 1994 program.

Hosted by Fayette County Farmers Association at the Fayette County Fairgrounds, about 40 people attended the catered meal and program.

Plans Announced

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Goodyear and the National Association of Conservation Districts will celebrate in December a half century of cooperation in rewarding outstanding conservation practices.

Plans for the 50th Goodyear/NACD Conservation Awards Program in Phoenix, Ariz., were announced here recently at a reunion of past grand award district representatives.

The program recognizes the outstanding achievements in resource management by conservation districts, their officials, and cooperating landowners and land users.

"Fifty years of recognizing people for their contributions to the environment is special," said Goodyear's Tom Ford, marketing manager for off-the-road and farm tires. "Especially when you consider this program was started long before it was fashionable to think 'green.'"

Grand awards are expense-paid, work-study trips for representatives of winning districts in each of the 50 states, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, District of Columbia, Guam and the Marianas.

More than 6,000 district representatives have participated in the grand awards trips since the program began in 1947.

MMI, DMV USA Sign Agreement For New Whey Project

STRONGSVILLE, Ohio — Milk Marketing Inc. (MMI), Strongsville, Ohio and DMV USDA, LaCrosse, Wis. have once again combined efforts to expand whey drying capacities and launch a demineralized whey operation at MMI's Italian cheese operation in New Wilmington, Pa.

In a joint statement recently, MMI's Chief Executive Office Don Schriver and DMV USA's President John Lyche announced that the collaboration between MMI and DMV USA signals a Phase III project for the strategic relationship forged between the two organizations in 1992.

This news comes on the heals of an announcement last October that DMV USA would market all of the fresh sweet whey powder processed at the cooperative's Pennsylvania cheese operation.

"Installation of a state-of-the-art dryer and new European processing systems, as well as a 14,000 square foot facility expansion, will allow MMI's manufacturing arm, Farmers Dairy Foods, Inc. (FDF), to generate premium demineralized whey powder, and boost its total annual output of dried whey products from 36 million pounds to 60 million pounds," said MMI's Schriver.

The new spray dryer's blueprint calls for a 100-foot high vertical chamber. Its state-of-the-art configuration is designed to maintain product integrity, consistent drying, and quality control.

Long-range plans between MMI and DMV USA include production of specialized demineralized whey products to be marketed under DMV Interational's Espiron® brand name.

Demineralized whey powder requires special processing. Mineral salts are extracted making the product more adaptable for refined ingredient uses. Demineralized whey is used in the dairy, confection, bakery, beverage, and infant formula industries.

Schriver and Lyche said that the demineralized whey powders will be marketed domestically through DMV USA and internationally through DMV International, baed in Veghel, the Netherlands.

"Our goal is to have a single, large source of high quality U.S. whey products available to customers," said Lyche.

"We are extremely pleased that DMV USA will be marketing a full range of FDF's whey products. The strategic alliance has brought high quality, value-added products from our partner in the U.S. for use by our own international team of marketers. We are very excited about that."

DMV USA is a division of DMV International in Veghel, the Netherlands. The company is a member of Campina Melkunie, the largest dairy cooperative in the European Community.

"Whether in the U.S. or Holland, we face the same kind of realities. Resources are tightening as dairy farmers and processor numbers decline world wide. In the meantime, demand for products like these increases with the growth of developing nations. We all recognize the market opportunities for a quality whey product with the growth of developing nations. We all recognize the market opportunities for a quality whey product supply," said Schriver.

"MMI and DMV USA simply pooled resources to tackle the challenge together for shared benefits and mutual opportunity."

With 1996 sales revenues of more than $1.3 billion, Milk Marketing Inc. is the nation's third largest dairy producer-owned cooperative and the 11th largest dairy food processor. Headquartered in Strongsville, Ohio, MMI's 9,000 dairy farm families in 11 states (Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, New York, West Virginia, Massachusetts, Vermont and Delaware) process and market nearly 7 billion pounds of milk.

Awards Presented At Cumberland 4-H Dairy Banquet

BETH MILLER
Cumberland Co. Correspondent

NEWBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Rebecca Comman of Boiling Springs turned out to be a double winner during the 41st annual Cumberland County 4-H dairy banquet.

During the event, which was held at the New Hope Church, Rebecca received not only the outstanding 4-H dairy member award, but also was chosen as the winner of the achievement award.

Rebecca, the daughter of Deb and Steve Comman, earned her outstanding dairy member honor for her activities during her busy seventh year in the county dairy club.

She exhibited the champion and reserve champion Jersey at the 1996 County 4-H roundup, kept records and showed five animal projects and completed Level 1 and Leadership.

She also is a member of the Flying Fingers 4-H Sewing Club, has served as a counselor of the ag science camp/ag day camp and was a teen leader for the farm safety day camp.

Rebecca has been elected president of the county dairy club for this year.

In addition, Rebecca, who won the achievement award based primarily on her top-notch score on her achievement form, was a member of the county's dairy judging team at state days and at the Pennsylvania All-American judging forum.

Two boys, Gregory Hammond of Mount Holly Springs and Jason Nailor of Mechanicsburg, shared the first-year dairy member award.

Gregory is the son of Guy and Sharon Hammond. Jason is the son of Joanne and Dennis Nailor. They won their awards based on interest in and attendance at club programs, the quality of their project work and their scores and participation in events.

Gregory attended the dairy workshop and junior dairy bowl, presented a demonstration at a 4-H meeting and showed two animals at the 4-H Dairy Roundup. In addition, he has had a perfect attendance record.

Jason was equally involved and exhibited the champion Guernsey and the reserve champion Milking Shorthorn during the 4-H roundup.

John Creek, the son of Pattie and Robbie Creek of Shippensburg, was the winner of the Merle Miller Memorial Award.

John is the club treasurer, completed the Unit 1 Team Leadership Project and was a dual presenter at speak out night. He also belongs to the Wildlife Habitat Club and the Cumberland County 4-H livestock club.

Three members were recognized during the banquet for completint 11 years of club work. They are Mandy Naugle and Betsy Walton of Carlisle and Heath Ocker of Shippensburg.

The youth weren't the only ones to be honored during the event. Four adult dairy leaders were recognized for lengthy service.

Mark Naugle of Carlisle and John Ocker of Shippensburg were both cited for 25 years of service. Sharon Hammond of Mount Holly Springs was honored for 15 years of service and Kathy Walton of Carlisle was recognized for 10 years.

What Dolly Means To Agriculutre, Medicine

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Dolly and the cloning technology she embodies should represent a boon to agriculture and to medical research, according to Ohio State University scientists.

Dolly is the adult ewe that Scotland scientists recently announced had been cloned by transferring the genetic material from one ewe into the egg of another.

"It's an outstanding scientific accomplishment," said Floyd Schanbacher, an animal scientist based in Wooster at Ohio State's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center. "However, it's not a sudden departure from what we've been doing. It's just the next logical step."

Already common in the dairy industry is semen and embryo collection and freezing, and, more recently, the splitting of embryos. "Instead of splitting, now we have cloning. So, it's a continued development of the progress of manipulation of genetics in livestock," he said.

The technology will speed agriculture's ability to reproduce animals with valuable traits: cows that produce more nutritious milk, cows that produce milk that can be used for medicinal purposes, or livestock that can withstand diseases better.

Respondents to a recent media poll who indicated they would not eat cloned vegetables probably don't know cloning in fruits and vegetables has been around in some form for centuries, said John Finer, a plant geneticist also based in Wooster.

"In the plant area, cutting up the eyes of potatoes and growing plants from them, that's cloning. Strawberry runners are clones. Navel oranges come from an original clone," Finer said. So do many wine grape varieties, apple varieties, kiwi fruit, lilies, roses, and Dahlias.

For farmers, the technology will initially be "size neutral," that is, it will be adoptable by anyone who wants it, said Luther Tweeten, Ohio State University agricultural economist.

However, "it will cost a fair amount of money and call for additional management, so big farmers will probably use it first," he said.

Tweeten expects large agribusiness companies that have been involved with biotechnology and with access to plenty of capital will be the first to adapt the technology and make it available to farmers who want to improve their livestock.

Breeding companies might also be the purveyors of the technology, depending on how complicated and expensive it is to adopt, he said.

The story is similar for medical applications of the technology, said Pappachan Kolattukudy, director of Ohio State's Neurobiotechnology Center. Pharmaceutical companies and the companies that provide animals to drug companies are likely to be the early adopters.

"Genetic variance is a problem with pharmaceutical testing. It's difficult to determine if certain results are an inherent nature of the process, or if it is because of the animal's genetic background. This breakthrough will provide companies with identical animals and will remove one big variability," he said.

Kolattukudy believes people do not need to fear the technology. "None of the experiments are done in a vacuum, and are only done after the approval of safety committees and institutions. We'll see no runaway experiments. There's practically no possibility of abuse," he said.

National Farmers Want Electronic Trading

AMES, Iowa — Placing the interests of American consumers and dairy producers at the forefront, National Farmers is suggesting methods to improve cheese and butter trading practices.

The group's ideas came in response to a recent announcement that the Chicago Mercantile Exchange is creating a new cash market for cheese to replace the National Cheese Exchange (NCE) in Green Bay, Wis.

"If trading officials instituted daily trading and greater market access through electronic trading with this move from the NCE to the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, it could improve dairy trading practices," said National Farmers President Gene Paul.

The CME market will open May 2, ending trading on the NCE. Officials at the Cheese Exchange in Green Bay said trading guidelines on the new CME market would be similar to those of the NCE, except the new market would use profesional brokers, allowing for anonymous trading.

"This anonymous trading could encourage smaller processors to participate in the CME cheese market, creating more competition," said National Farmers Dairy Department Director of Operations Joe Paris.

"Competition is healthy in any market, and this allows for greater trading opportunities by companies of all sizes."

The CME provides internal monitoring of trading activities in some of its markets, and its oversight group is the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

"We're encouraged that a system for assuring that industry-recognized trading practices are followed is in place," Paris said. "National Farmers supports direct oversight of this new cheese market by the CFTC or the Federal Trade Commission."

National Farmers and other leading farm groups are suggesting several steps to improve dairy pricing structure.

"It's critical to the health of America's dairy producers to adopt a competitive pay price system in this country," said Paris. While this change could bring improvement, dairy producer pay prices for milk should not be based on trading of processed dairy products, he said.

"This change coincides with USDA's actions to reform the federal milk marketing order system," said Paris. "We hope to see the reform process produce a more fair and equitable milk pricing structure."

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — "Using the MUN results analyzed by Pa. DHIA has saved me $8,000 per year in just protein savings alone, which pays for milk testing services two fold," states George Cudoc Jr., farm manager at Marburger Dairy Incorporated, in Buter County.

"The culling rate has dropped from 35 percent to 18 percent within the time frame of 1996," George said.

He said he contributes these figures to knowing how to feed the cows better by implemention of the MUN tool. Since beginning to test for MUN in October 1995, the ration has been adjusted from 19 percent protein down to a 16.4 total mixed ration anaylsis.

As a direct result of these changes, days to first service on the Marburger herd dropped from 90 to 79 days while the conception rate improved dramatically from 28 to 49 percent.

George has a simple philosophy that he lives by, which is the fact that one must learn from history. The MUN report supplied by Pa. DHIA enables him to look at past history and make management changes for the betterment of the future. Two of the reports used most by George are the SCC report as well as the MUN report.

The following charts and graphs show statistical information gathered on 160 TMR feed cows from 9/12/95 through 2/4/1997 at Marburger Dairy.

Chart number 1 is a production history of milk, percent fat, percent protein, MUN anaylsis, and 150 day adjusted average. Often with newly introduced technology some personal observations can be as important as text book information.

Dr. Ferguson, at the 1996 annual Pennsylvania State DHIA meeting, gave evidence that as MUN levels rise, milk production goes down. Also, the normally accepted range for MUN is 10-14.

Starting in October of 1995, Marberger Dairy Inc. started on the MUN program. For the first year they were able to make changes in MUN values after we saw what they were.

Unfortunately, this after-effect management style does not serve to enhance production or to make money. As seen on the chart, on 17 observations — milk production decreases when MUN level increased, and milk production increases when MUN levels decrease most of the time, especially the further we fall out of the normally accepted range.

To illustrate this further, included is a graph "A" showing this variation.

So here we are with this information, but how do we use it?

Marketing Forum Presents Pennsylvania Pride Potential

The thrust of the presentations was that it may be advantageous for the many different production sectors to begin deliberately joining forces for some marketing promotion under one roof — the Pennsylvania Pride theme.

The afternoon session included break-out groups and discussions, and, while no consensus was reached, those representing the different groups seemd to agree that such a strategy could benefit demand and respect for Pennsylvania-grown products.

The forum was opened by William Troxell, chairman of the Pennsylvania Commodity Roundtable, and state Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius.

Three speakers highlighted the day: Arthur Brown, New Jersey secretary of agriculture; Dr. John Lord, chairman of the St. Joseph's University Marketing Department; and Gordon Montgomery, vice president of client services, with the Leo Burnett Advertising Agency.

The remainder of the meeting consisted of an overview of some of the Bureau's activities by William Mathias, its director, and the different discussions.

In his presentation, New Jersey Ag Secretary Brown discussed the "Jersey Fresh" program that the agriculture department there has helped support through financial cost-sharing and purchase of television commercials.

He said that three 30-second commercial were produced and aired from April through November last year that promoted the state's horticultural products under the slogan, "What a difference Jersey Fresh makes."

Commercials not only hit the New Jersey audience, but was aired in every state in the nation, as well as being aired abroad, some not intentional. He said that people in Spain and Australia have seen it, as well as 46 million homes in the United States and Canada.

Radio commercials were produced in both English and Spanish. Banners were placed on the back of busses.

What helps, he said, is providing information on each commodity, so that consumers know how to select, how to store, and how to prepare the different commodities. Such information was provided for five commodities last year, and five more are planned this year.

Matching funds were provided by the department to the commodity groups, and of $150,000 in seed money, the commodity groups came up with enough to provide $500,000, which represents a more than doubling of private matching funds.

Last year was the first for the Jersey Fresh quality logo, but it was also the fourth year of the Jersey Fresh sampling program. In the sampling program, the New Jersey Agriculture Society provided samples of New Jersey commodities and targeted the non-farm public.

In-store programs provided samples of such things as blueberries, peaches, apples and zuchinni, and last year an estimated 80,000 consumers received direct contact.

Brown said the program tries to utilize promotion royalty at the Jersey Fresh promotion programs. He said the different promotion queens (etc.) are good representatives. "It's good them (the royalty), and it's good for (the commodity groups)."

Brown said the program emphasizes the importance of chain stores to reach the audiences, and road side markets and stands are also very active in the promotion program.

The Jersey Fresh program works differently than what currently happens in Pennsylvania. While the Pennsylvania Pride logo has been around for a couple of years, it doesn't serve as a focal point for a consumer to go to and find out about Pennsylvania's commodities.

Instead, Pennsylvania has a range of commodity groups that generally work independently.

If Pennsylvania were to adopt a "Jersey Fresh" type of promotion program, just as an example, Pennsylvania asparagus could be linked with Pennsylvania rainbow trout and in-state grown new potatoes, and perhaps an in-state complimentary wine, to form a springtime promotion under the Pennsylvania Pride logo and serve all four commodity groups equally well and at the same time.

From the left, state Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius and state Sen. Dan Delp, chairman of the Senate Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee, welcome New Jersey Ag Secretary Arthur Brown as a speaker at a commodity marketing forum.

Further, it is presumed that the consumer would be better educated and retain that knowledge about the range, the uses, and the quality of Pennsylvania-produced products.

Brown said that while "T"-shirts, hats and buttons with the Jersey Fresh logo have been produced, some of the roadside stands owners have produced their own, because there weren't enough for demand.

The Jersey Fresh has also been used by pick-your-own farms, orchards and wineries.

He said the New Jersey Turnpike roadside markets (it took 14 years to get that approved, while in Pennsylvania State Rep. Shelia Miller promoted the successful program) also participate and the turnpike gets 30,000 people per day past two sites last year.

There another 30 or so producers involved in tailgate sales. One of the problems they are experiencing is not that the demand isn't there for the produce, but that there aren't enough farmers to participate in the markets.

"However, I know one farm that has seven trucks to send out to markets," Brown said.

Brown said that it is felt that there is still a lot of market activity in which the program can be involved, but that consumer awareness of the New Jersey Fresh symbol and developing a preference for it are the bottom line goal of the entire program.

One of the things Brown stressed is how producers treat the markets and marketing under the Jersey Fresh program — the quality must be there. It can't be second rate stuff, or it will be self-defeating.

And to that end, he said all producers who market with the Jersey Fresh logo have to be adamant in ensuring that only the best produce is sold that way. A lack of uniform quality can destroy the integrity of the program and consumer confidence.

"They (the consumers) don't remember all the perfect ones, just the one bad one," Brown said.

He said that while the department spends a lot of time with the supermarkets, they also police them well too, to ensure that some quick-buck unethical practices are not conducted that could besmirch the Jersey Fresh name.

"You have to work with the produce manager. Years ago a produce manager was a career. Now it's not," he said, adding that modern supermarkets combine managing produce in with other job requirements.

"But you still have some (managers) out there who are very good at it."

There's also a quality assurance program associated and it gets enforced. A committee goes over the grading standards, and some want higher standards than what the U.S. Department of Agriculture has set (which Brown said is not very high).

There are field inspectors spot check to make sure everyone marketing under the Jersey Fresh program living up to the standards.

The state also saw fit to provide $8 million in an economic development program grant of which $6 million went to farmers to increase efficiencies on the farm to enhance their competitiveness.

Money was also sent directly to a cooperative under the Business Incentive Program (BIG) to improve facilities. The largest single grant under that was $100,000, but it enabled to help make a certain cooperative be able to "ship with the best of them," Brown said.

He said all the money, except for the matching funds, came from the New Jersey Legislature. $1.2 million of that came from state funds.

He said that because New Jersey producers grow 100 different fruits and vegetables they don't individually have a lot of money, but under the program, the consumers can learn what is local and how high the quality is.

In another presentation, Dr. John Lord talked about what research there has found about consumer trends and demands and how that might correlate into marketing opportunities.

He said the primary focus of the University Food Marketing Department is processed foods, not agriculture, but it received an

USDA grant to create the Center for Food Markets in the Business Department. "The goal," he said, "is to take some of what we know of markets in processing and transfer that to agricultural production."

He said that means that producers have to understand the importance of promotion and how to bring value to the customer.

According to Dr. Lord, "Marketing is relatively straightforward. The number one answer to every marketing question is, 'It depends.'"

In other words, he said that in order to make decisions about marketing, the value that the consumer places on an item, who the consumer is, and what drives that value have to be understood.

The promotion of that quality, the delivery of what is expected, and convenience for the consumer are key, not just who has the lowest price.

That value, he said, is what has to be delivered.

And that value has to be communicated to the consumer. "You can't just sit back and hope things are self-evident."

Lord said there are two key words that described what research has revealed about modern revolutions and evolutions of markets: health and convenience.

He said that today there is a "tremendous emphasis on healthy" foods. He said now consumers are concerned about what is put in foods, not just what is taken out, citing such additives as beta carotene.

He said the quality of and the availability of prepared foods impact a consumers quality of life, and if that can be stressed in a product line there is opportunity.

He said two of the most successful food brands are Healthy Choice and Snackwell, because they imply that consumption benefits health.

Campbell's product lines, widely recognized for its line of soups, has developed a line called Intelligent Cuisine, and offers mail-order, pre-planned frozen foods designed for people with high blood pressure or diabetes. He said a full week's worth of prepared meals costs about $80, though it all has to be eaten.

He said the competition is for shares of the stomach.

"We now shop differently," he said, which means there are "all sorts of new formats of competition."

In stores, the growth is not in the center of the store, but on the perimeters. "Not just flowers, but perpared foods," he said. Lord said restaurants are now getting more into carry out.

At large plants employing many people, there is demand for "grab and go" meals.

There is a merging of supermarkets and food service, he said. The strategy is "anytime, anywhere" to provide that service. "People survive not waiting for people to come to them, but by going to the people."

Some of the apparent reasons for the changes in consumer preferences are the number of women in the workplace, which seems to be stabilizing at about 60 percent, he said, as well as women working longer hours and taking on more responsibilities away from home.

However, he said that women are still the primary food providers in the home.

"The traditional family is history. In 1960 there were about 43 percent of couples had a non-working spouse. In 1995 that was at about 8 percent.

About 30 percent of households are single parent.

There are smaller households, with about 2.54 people.

About 26 percent of households are single-person.

"The housewife is gone from the kitchen," Lord said. That has resulted in what he called, "cooking illiteracy."

According to Lord, prepared foods are essential for working mothers.

Also, he said that the population of those over 85 has increased five-fold, and longevity has become part of people's "life plan."

This means there are many opportunities to market for that group and the implications for types of products and packaging are different. The aged loose strength in their hands, the eyesight generally is diminished, and packages should be designed to make them easier to read and open.

Ethinic changes are also strong.

Other considerations, he said, are that people want to stay at home for a variety of reasons, "not the least of which is safety."

When they do cook, Lord said more and more people are cooking with using leftovers in mind.

Also, there are more double-income families, so the implication is that time is more important than money. "Time is the currency of the '90s," he said.

Some of the other food marketing directions include having "just-in-time" meals; types of "comfort" foods; offering "cooking kits" or "speed scratch."

Club stores, convenience stores, restaurant carry-out, and vending machines are more typical. Lord said it's almost a rebirth of the "Automats" of earlier in the century.

"There is nothing new, but a recycling of things we had for years."

Cooperative ventures are making their way into the markets and combining health-positioned fine foods with others to offer "meal solutions," are what is apparently in demand.

Lord repeated that delivering "meal solutions," is what is needed — quick, fresh, home-made taste and quality meals that don't require much thought or preparation.

However, he said that with some of these, there is an increased concern over food safety. With canned goods, shelf-life isn't a strong concern, he said, but it is a concern when selling fresh, hot foods that require proper treatment and utilization.

Another insight into modern consumer trends is that people don't eat three meals per day. "They eat five times per day." That means there are now 35 meals per week.

"The new dining rooms of America are in the office," Lord said. Further, he said that consumers want health benefits from their foods, but not at the expense of taste.

In other areas, he said that working people still want their meat and potatoes, though there is a demand for more vegetables.

And people want an "experience" with their meal. For example, he said that at a restaurant he knows, all the employees sing opera. He said unaccompanied arias can burst out from the kitchen at any time.

There is also research into coming up with "pharmacuetical foods" as part of a "functional foods" project that St. Joseph's is conducting in partnership with The Rutger's State University in New Jersey.

Lord said another potential market is in developing "green" products. (Which is what Rodale Institute has been suggesting as a possible marketing strategy of dairy products in a partnership with Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, though details on what happens to that relationship after the April 1 merger of ADC and Land O'Lakes have not been made available.)

In general, Lord said that there are many apparent opportunities for marketing domestic product to domestic consumers, but the agricultural sector has to be aware of consumer wants and needs, not historic or current farm family wants and needs.

Dairy Management Column

At this time of the year — the end of winter — it seems our milking animals long for something green. They are not coming into heat as well as usual, nor are they settling as well. And their ailments are more varied and frequent than at other times of year.

Once again pastures are getting green, and our fields of winter rye, winter wheat and other cereals are pushing new green growth, especially in response to a little nitrogen boost. As soon as the soil is firm enough to let our cows out to graze, these cereals will begin to work wonders on the health and production of our cows. This will also lower the cost of production because of the high nutrient content of this early grazing. Of course, a word of caution is always in order. Lushness can be overfed and cause diarrhea. If nitrate contents are suspected, testing is necessary.

Other than grazing and green chopping, the next best way of getting the most of the new forage growth is to plan ensiling, fresh or, even better, wilted. One advantage to wilted rye as haylage is that it can be harvested earlier without interference from unfavorable weather.

Rye in the boot-stage has at least 15 percent crude protein content. Its nutrients are also much more digestible than when harvested in the heading stage or more advanced maturity. Some research has shown that cows will milk as well when rye haylage is fed in the place of corn silage. In addition, a protein saving is possible in the grain supplement because of the higher protein content in the rye haylage.

Rye in the boot stage will have about 15-20 percent dry matter, but good haylage should have at least 30-35 percent dry matter in horizontal storage systems — higher in vertical silo or plastic bag storage systems. The length of wilting in the field varies not only with weather but with the type of mower-crusher-conditioner machine used to harvest and with the thickness of the stand. Usually only 24-30 hours are needed for good wilting.

Wilted rye is a bit more difficult to cut for silage than corn is. Sharp cutter blades are necessary. The chopper adjustment should give fiber length of ½ to 1½ inches to ensure that the haylage packs well, especially in horizontal storage, and also has the minimum fiber length for optimum rumen health, which depends on chewing and re-chewing of long fibers to prevent displaced abomasum and low milk fat syndromes. Rye haylage (and that made from other cereal grains) is an excellent milk-producing feed.

Another excellent spring forage for dairy cattle, much overlooked in this area, is green alfalfa. My early boyhood memories of dairy farming are of the daily green chopping of alfalfa for our cows. This feed pushed milk and saved grain supplement costs.

Some recent Midwestern studies compared alfalfa fed as silage or as hay. Alfalfa silage was in plastic bags; of course, it could have been wilted as well or better. Thirty-five high-producing Holsteins were fed alfalfa silage or alfalfa hay of equal pre-harvest quality with some very interesting results. Ensilig resulted in less leaf loss of the alfalfa and, therefore, in a 4 percent higher protein content of the silage compared to the hay cut from the same field at the same time. The dry matter harvest form the fields was 27 percent higher per acre when ensiling alfalfa than when making hay. Cows were fed either kind of alfalfa in a total mixed ration (TMR).

Cows on the alfalfa silage ate significantly more total dry matter per day, produced 17 percent more milk and had a higher total solids content in the milk than the cows on the alfalfa hay TMR. No differences were noted in blood urea nitrogen content, body weight and conditions or health of the cows. Income over feed costs was significantly higher for the alfalfa silage cows by 39 percent compared to the alfalfa hay fed cows.

It would seem that harvesting alfalfa without the loss during haymaking, especially during spring with its uncertain weather, and feeding it as silage or haylage is an excellent alternative. With its higher protein content, it is nutritionally better and also more profitable.

FARM FORUM

One of the reasons why fertile areas such as Lancaster County and many other places in the US, have not jumped into this because they can "afford" some soil erosion, organic matter depletion, and heavy pesticide use as a price to pay for top yields. Other countries and places in the US with poorer quality soil and very little topsoil cannot "afford" these losses or they go hungry. Folks like Carlos Crovetto (Chile), Frank Dijksta (Brazil), and others from around the world as well as right here in Lancaster County have proven that long term no-tillage works. With the use of cover crops and crop rotation, commercial fertilizer and pesticides can be significantly reduced by using no-tillage. This has great appeal where cash for inputs is scarce and for those of us who want to make a decent living while working with nature as it does its part in helping to produce a healthy food product.

Steve Groff

Editor,

In 1996 milk production dropped due to poor forage and inadequate corn supplies. This caused cheese marketers, afraid of inadequate inventories in the fall, to bid up the price of cheese. The management of the major cooperatives responded by shutting down their milk dryers and moving all available milk and powder into cheese production. This maximized the cooperatives' profit and probably netted the membership an extra penny or two per cwt.

The increased cheese production in the face of lower milk production resulted in a lack of nonfat dry milk powder. As a result the USDA shut down the D.E.I.P. program due to a "lack of supply." This increased cheese production also caused by a small increase in chese inventories. This gave Kraft the excuse and means to drive down the price of cheese in October. This crash cost the nations dairy farmers $4-5/cwt. Obviously the people who run the cooperatives were penny-wise and dollar-foolish. Most people learn from their mistakes.

In an interview in Dairy Profit Weekly, 3/17/97, Don Storhoff, CEO of Foremost Farms USA, Baraboo, Wis., stated "...Clearly there was more money to be made by putting milk into cheese manufacturing plants rather than nonfat dry milk plants." Foremost Farms, to garner the highest returns for members cut powder production 51% and expanded cheese production 34%. "When you examine the facts of the 1996 dairy industry, it becomes clear that it wasn't the amount of milk that had as great an impact on markets and prices as how that milk was used," Storhoff says. Foremost plans to reduce nonfat dry milk production 14% this year, while increasing cheese production 4%.

Cheese inventories are starting to build and the price of cheese has stagnated. It is obvious that if cooperatives continue to push cheese production that their members will be forced into oblivion. It is also obvious that the people who run the cooperatives understand this yet they continue to push cheese production. Why?

The answer is simple. It is the reason that, despite controlling 70% of the nation's milk, farmer members of cooperatives are becoming impoverished and liquidated. The people who run cooperatives only care about cooperative profits. If lowering the price farmers receive improves cooperative profits they will and do lower them.

What is the answer? There is none! So long as cooperatives can block vote for their members, lobby congress, control most of what their membership hears and understands about milk pricing, and own or run plants nothing will change. The people running cooperatives are judged by the cooperatives' ledger, not the farmer-member's ledger.

CROPP Seeks Farmers

HAGERSTOWN, Md. — CROPP Cooperative which markets dairy products nationwaide under the ORGANIC VALLEY label will be having informational meetings in the Hagerstown, Md., and Gettysburg areas for dairy farmers interested in this new opportunity.

Topics of discussion will include an introduction to this member-owned organization of dairies from six states, as well as its 10-year history as an organic cooperative, and what is required on the farm for membership.

CROPP sells over 30 dairy products here in the Mid-Atlantic region, and now has the ability to offer farmers here a way to enter the organic market and say goodbye to year-round low milk pricing.

In addition to dairy, the cooperative markets other farm products and provides member services such as grain availability information and contracting, organic certification assistance and fee payment, and herd health assistance 24 hours a day toll-free through one of its experienced dairies in Wisconsin.

Steven Fiscus, CROPP's eastern dairy pool representative will be hosting two meetings on Friday, April 4 in Hagerstown.

Interested dairies from the region are cordially invited to either one.

The first will be for lunch at the Black Steer Restaurant off of I-81, exit 1 in Pennsylvania on Route 163 (Mason-Dixon Rd.). The meeting will begin promptly at 11 a.m. and end around 2 p.m.

For those unable to attend the lunch meeting, Mr. Fiscus will be available at the Washington County Library in downtown Hagerstown Friday evening, April 4 from 6 to 8:45 p.m.

The Library is located on the corner of South Potomac Street and Antietam Street near the square in Hagerstown. From I-81 take Route 40 East to the square (Rt. 40 becomes Washington Street). From I-70, take Route 40 West into downtown. Advance reservations are required for this meeting.

The following Friday, April 11, CROPP will be hosting an informational meeting outside Gettysburg for interested dairies in Maryland and Pennsylvania.

A lunch meeting will be held at Spangler's Restaurant, off Rt. 15 on Rt. 394 (Hunterstown) beginning at 10:30 a.m. and concluding soon after dinner.

Anyone wishing to learn more about this expanding sector of agriculture is encouraged to attend.

If you plan to attend these meetings, or for more information about the Co-op, call Steven Fiscus at 301-478-2103 for reservations by April 2.

some evidence of worth for preconditioning cattle before auction. He supplied information of the Superior Livestock Auction and data from 1994-1996.

A combination of questions and statistical analyses was used to compare the costs of preconditioned calves against those not preconditioned at seven sales conducted in 1995 and nine sales in 1996. There were a total of 1,576 cattle lots in 1995 and 1,793 lots in 1996. Prices obtained for more than 200,000 calves in 1995 and more than 220,000 calves in 1996 were looked at.

Odde reviewed the different commercially available preconditioning programs available and what they entail. The bottom line: there was an advantage in price of $1.35 per hundredweight compared to calves not in any preconditioning vaccination program in 1995 sales. That same year, one vaccination program showed a $2.47 per hundredweight benefit.

In 1996 sales, one program had a benefit totaling $1 per hundredweight of calves sold. The same year, another program showed a benefit in terms of price at $3 per hundredweight.

Odde indicated he saw that buyers are willing to pay more for the vaccinated calves that have protection against common respiratory problems that can plague feedlots. These diseases pose a big risk, and vaccination programs work wonders to "raise the disease resistance" while producers learn to reduce the risk challenge, he said.

South Dakota producers have been challenged this year with protecting herd health, despite 90 inches of snow (three times their normal amount, said Odde), and losses of cattle totalling more than 100,000 head.

The different diseases of which the cattle are protected from include infectious bovine rhinotracheitis or IBR, also known as "Red Nose," an upper respiratory system infection; bovine virus diarrhea, or BVD; bovine respiratory syncytial virus or BRSV; and the most devastating one, pasteurella, which causes calf pneumonia.

Midwest producers make use of mostly modified live viruses in their vaccination programs and are routinely used in bigger feedlots, Odde said.

Odde provided an overview of total quality assurance, part of the whole idea of improving quality in a consumer-driven industry. More and more, producers and veterinary health services will form more closely tied "strategic alliances" to ensure improved beef quality and perhaps a better price for cattle producers.

In a survey conducted by the National Cattlemen's Association in the summer of 1995, cattle feeders and stockers were asked a series of questions on their buying objectives. One thing was clear: buyers aren't satisfied to merely look at calves and decide on a price. They want backgrounding information — more than 70 percent of the buyers wanted to receive information the cattle prior to negotiating a price. Sixty-four percent would price the cattle differently if the vaccination program was revealed before a sale.

But the program, if implemented, must follow a careful "strategy" of management, and one of those methods must involve removing stress. That can be done by removing cows from calves.

"The calves stay in the environment they are adapted to," said Odde. Also, the producer must provide access to clean water, access to palatable feed, an absence of dust, and keep the calves in small groups.

Odde said several companies and universities are coming up with different "value-added calf," or VAC, programs. Included is the Tex-VAC program from Texas A&M University; the Superior Livestock Video Auction VAC; Producer's Edge; and others.

For the future of the industry, Odde said, "I believe in order for our industry to do well and thrive, we must do a better job of working together, talking together, and understanding the position of people in the industry."

Using Resources

"The successful cattle feeder of tomorrow is going to be a guy out there looking for the bargains and being able to capitalize on them," said Jim Hogue, partner in Agri-Basics, Inc., Mount Joy.

Hogue provided detail on how producers can cut costs by using feed resources more effectively.

One way is through the use of inexpensive by-products from food manufacturers and other industries.

Hogue said that by-products can lower costs significantly but producers need to be aware of limits on the use of them as feed, such as the amount of salt, fat, and foreign material they may contain. They also have a "grief factor" and sometimes aren't real easy to work with, he indicated.

Nevertheless, Hogue provided some alternative feed sources that have worked for some producers:

- Bagel logs. These bagel chips measure 18 inches long and 2-3 inches around and provide a good feed value for cattle, but have to be ground down with a special rig. A big problem is finding exactly how much dry matter, compared to water, they contain.
- Newspaper. Cattle enjoy the soybean ink contained in newspaper, which has some feed value, but a lot would have to be fed to meet dry matter, roughage, protein, and other nutrient requirements.
- Sweet corn fodder. Hogue provided examples of trucked-in sweet corn fodder that comes off the truck at 85 percent moisture. The fodder is a decent energy source, much like corn silage, Hogue said.
- Vegetables from canneries. These include fresh green beans, dried beans, small cooked white canning potatoes, and other items. All are good feeds, noted Hogue, but "carry fierce amounts of water."

For the use of by-products and other crops (such as barley, wheat, and cottonseed) in the feeding program, producers should make use of more commodity sheds. Hogue showed a picture of a shed holding six bays. But 3-4 bays can be sufficient for some producers.

For years many industry experts have looked with disdain on the ability to sustain a viable cattle feeder industry in Pennsylvania. But Hogue indicated that he sees "a lot of growth potential for the cattle business in this part of the country," if only producers could focus more on efficiency.

He said he tells his clients that they are not farming — rather, they are in the "resource management business." One way to start is to view the crops and cattle as "two separate enterprises," and both have to make money. Also, what you produce "should be sold at harvest time," and not to forget adding other expenses, including storage and interest charges, to the bottom line calculations.

To do so, producers should start using a total mixed ration.

He indicated one farmer realized a better bottom line almost instantly, because the use of high-priced feed was cut, the feeding was more effective, the cattle percentage graded improved, and the cattle simply did better with the mixer.

Hogue provided expertise on how to make use of the mixer, how to feed different types of corn, and controlling variables.

Better bunk management comes in handy, especially when "no crop produces more energy per acre than corn silage," what he calls the "king" of energy feeds.

"Keep efficiency in mind, watch the little things, and consider your cattle as profit centers, not feed disposal units," Hogue said.

Implants

Dr. Lowell Wilson, Penn State, said the best investment a producer can make in feeding cattle is the use of implants.

But producers make "more mistakes in administering them to the animal than with almost any other product," he said.

Wilson reviewed the different implants available approved by FDA. Many include the naturally occurring hormones present in cattle, synthetic, steroid-like products, and nonsteroid anabolic agents.

But producers need to follow a careful implant strategy.

Without a carefully realized strategy, producers could see an actual decrease in the grade of cattle on feed.

Implants help the cattle make more efficient use of nutrients in feed. They also improve grading and carcass value.

Studies indicated that, with stocker cattle, the return over cost improved 5-25 percent in average daily gain. There was a 5-15 percent improvement in feed efficiency, with improvements per head ranging from $5-$15 and some up to $40 per head.

The economic value of using implants in Pennsylvania alone total about $80 million and nationally about $700 million, according to Wilson.

Wilson reviewed the steps to use when using implants.

Animals must first be carefully restrained with the proper head gate, the implant site must be cleansed, the needle must go into the middle third of the ear and must be fully inserted, with room for deposit, and the needle must be pulled back slowly to make sure the implant pellet "takes."

All the problems of bunched and crushed pellets, partial implants, and others can be circumvented, Wilson said, "by taking your time and making sure the implant is put in there" the correct way.

Handling Facilities

John McFadden, Hoecht-Roussel, Inc., told producers that "everybody loses when livestock get bruises," and that proper handling facilities is key.

McFadden indicated ways to keep down the incidences of bruises by proper handling, which includes the use of enclosed side chutes, removing distractions and noise, move the cattle slowly, and invest in the proper head gates that will work in your operation.

Also, Dr. Chuck Lambert, chief economist with the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA), provided an overview of economic trends in the industry.

Lambert said that now, per-capita of beef consumption (the amount of beef per pounds an average person eats per year) is between 64-67 pounds at about $2 a pound. Compared to inflation, that's about $1 less per pound than prices were in the 1970s, when per capita consumption was greater.

Last year was a "peak" year when there were 103.5 million cattle in the feedlots. As of Jan. 1 this year, there were less than 102 million on feed.

In the mid-1970s, there were 132 million cattle on feed, but in 1996 there was more beef because of heavier carcass weights, better feed efficiency, and other factors.

The NCBA was aware of the "economic stress and financial disruption in farm and ranch country," last year, Lambert said.

That was because of the "double jeopardy" of high cattle numbers and high feed cost passed back to the producer.

Price paid to feeders was 20-22 percent of the total retail value in 1996, according to Lambert.

What producers and the promotional organizations must strive to do is not only produce a product less expensively, but find some way to market the round, chucks, and trimmings, which make up half of the beef carcass. And ground beef remains 45 percent of the total U.S. beef consumption. "Demand on ground beef is week at best and declining at worst," Lambert said.

Fortunately for domestic producers, the Mexico cattle import market is drying up as the Mexican economy stabilizes.

Milk Production Down

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Milk production in Pennsylvania during February 1997 totaled 824 million pounds, 5 percent below last year's production, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS).

The number of milk cows in the state during the month averaged 639,000 head, down 2,000 from January and 6,000 less than February 1996.

Production per cow averaged 1,290 pounds in February, 95 pounds less than January's production per cow of 1,385 pounds and 55 pounds less than February 1996.

Milk production in the 20 states surveyed during February 1997 totaled 10.4 billion pounds, down 2 percent compared to production during February 1996. The decrease is due to February 1996 having an extra day because it was leap year.

On a daily basis, February 1997 U.S. milk production increased 2 percent versus February 1996.

The number of milk cows averaged 7.75 million head, down 81,000 head from a year earlier. Production per cow averaged 1,337 pounds, 10 pounds less than February of last year. Again, the leap year in 1996 caused the monthly rate decline.

Dairy Cooperative Reports Good Year

I have the privilege of working with these people in sister cooperatives and organizations. Even in Congress and state government we are getting more and more of these kind of people. But we need more.

"And I am always challenged with the enthusiasm of our young cooperators," Walgrove said. "The effort to make the industry profitable is worth it for our children and our children's children if we can forage an industry that is profitable for them. I assure you this cooperative is going to continue to strive to produce that future you all deserve."

President Russell Wachter reported that the cooperative had one of the best years ever. The cooperative returned 30 cents per hundredweight to members for 1996 over-order premiums and in a "thirteenth check." These returns are in addition to the 15 cents per hundredweight the cooperative secured for members through the efforts of MACMMA. Members can look forward to additional earnings from their divisions in September.

The cooperative was started 77 years ago when a group of dairymen looked for more voice in the marketplace. This cooperative effort now markets nearly two billion pounds of milk for its 1150 dairy farmers in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, Delaware and West Virginia. The cooperative serves the majority of fluid milk needs in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area.

In addition to Maryland and Virginia's home office and marketing division in Reston, Va., the association has three other divisions to serve members. Marva Maid, the cooperative's fluid processing arm in Newport News, Va., is one of the leading market share holders in the growing Tidewater region of Virginia. The cooperative's milk is sold under the Marva Maid name and as private label product.

Marva Maid, built by Maryland and Virginia in 1962, recently expanded cold storage capacity on its original site and annexed an adjacent warehouse to keep up with product demand.

Maryland and Virginia's Manufacturing Division, commonly called "Laurel," produces butter, nonfat dry milk, and condensed milk for customers across the country and around the world. The plant, located in Laurel, Md., is one of a handful of facilities across the United States that makes and packages butter for Land O'Lakes. Nonfat milk solids and condensed milk are processed at Laurel and end up as ingredients in such foods as bread, baby formula, candy, and ice cream.

The manufacturing division has been a part of Maryland and Virginia since 1955. As well as providing value-added dollars for Maryland and Virginia members, the division acts as a balancing plant for many milk processors in the region.

The associations' equipment division is operated as a service for members. Members can purchase farm and dairy items from the equipment warehouse in Frederick, Md., or from a route truck that visits member farms periodically. Division savings are allocated to members at year end as a percentage of their total purchases.

In addition to providing an avenue for collective marketing for its members, Maryland and Virginia also joins with other milk marketing cooperatives in various federations and associations for marketing, promotional and political strength. The association's individual and joint efforts are all aimed toward fulfilling the cooperative's mission of providing quality dairy products at fair prices to consumers and equitable returns to dairy farmers.

In addition to financial reports, members also applauded their peers who celebrated 50 to 75 year anniversaries with the association. Families celebrating 75 years were Mehrle H. and Thelma H. Ramsburg, Brookfield Farms, Thurmont, Md.; Martz Farm, Frederick, Md.; and Rudell Beall and Sons, Inc., Clarksburg, Md.

Farms with 50 year membership were Dennis and Audrey Bowman and Steve and Beth Bowman, Big Spring Farm, Inc., Union Bridge, Md.; Harold J., Martha F. and Robert H. Burrier, Frederick, Md.; Maynard, Jane, Donald and Donna Grossnickle, Myersville, Md.; Leonard Grove Dairy, Midland, Va.; W.E. Henshaw, Wilbob Farms, Inc., Kearneysville, W.V.; Jones Dairy Farm, Aroda, Va.; David and Elizabeth Small and Marty and Rhonda Miller, Shenandoah Junction, W.V.; and Charles, Irene, Donald, Gloria, Mark and Angie Savage, Mount Airy, Md.

Richard and Naomi Speer, last year's outstanding young cooperator couple, gave a report of their activities, and Steve and Kelli Wilson, Parkton, Md., were announced as the new young cooperators. Steve and Kelli were named at the PennMarva Young Cooperator program held in Gettysburg earlier this month. In addition, runner-up couples were named as follows: Steve and Marion Jones, Neelyton, Pa., 1st runner-up; Leonard and Bonnie JoGreek, Delta, Pa., 2nd runner-up; and John and Mary Goodwin, Orange, Va., 3rd runner-up.

Millers Are ADC's Outstanding Young Cooperators

SOUTHAMPTON (Bucks Co.) — Robert W. (Bob) and Diane E. Miller of Northeast, Md., captured Atlantic Dairy Cooperative's 1997 Outstanding Young Cooperator title at the 27th Pennmarva Young Cooperator Contest held March 5-6 at the Eisenhower Inn and Conference Center in Gettysburg.

The Millers topped a field of eight contestants, all of whom participated in individual interviews with the judges and presented a five-minute impromptu speech on cooperative-related topics.

The Millers operate Pleasant View Farms in partnership with Bob's father and uncle. The dairy and grain operation includes 850 acres and 320 head of Holstein and Guernsey cows. Bob is responsible for nearly every aspect of managing the farm, including cows and crops. Diane oversees the calves and young replacement heifers.

Also named as winners in the contest were: Robert L. and Robin K. Rohrer, Washington Boro, second place; Edward H. and Tina M. Wilkinson, Aspers, third place; Terry A. and Kathy A. Egolf, Waynesboro, fourth place; and Stephen D. and Kathleen Aument, Quarryville, fifth place.

As the Young Cooperator winners, these young farmers will be named to Atlantic's Young Cooperator Consultant Committee for a three-year term. They will join the 1995 and 1996 winners in developing and planning future Young Cooperator activities.

Additionally, the Millers and Rohrers are to attend the National Milk Producers Federation annual meeting Dec. 1-4 in Orlando, Fla. The Wilkinsons, Egolfs and Aument are to attend the National Institute on Cooperative Education Aug. 4-7 in Pittsburgh.

Judges for the contest were Carl Brown of F.M. Brown's Sons Inc., Birdsboro; Christie Lincoln, New York Holstein Association, Tully, N.Y.; and Ken Wisner, former Extension agent in Frederick and Washington counties, Maryland.

Atlantic's Young Cooperator program is designed to educate young farmer members about cooperatives and the dairy industry. The yearlong program, which includes attendance at board of director meetings, the annual delegate meeting and educational seminars, develops leadership among cooperative members, ages 21 through 40.

Robert W. and Diane E. Miller

Robert (Bob) W. and Diane E. Miller operate an 850-acre, 320-head Holstein and Guernsey farm near Northeast, Md. Average annual production at Pleasant View Farms (F.G. Miller and Sons) is Holsteins, 18,538 pounds of milk and 686 pounds of fat, and Guernseys, 11,950 pounds of milk and 531 pounds of fat on 150 cows. Crops include corn, soybeans, barley, wheat, alfalfa, grass hay and green beans. They also have a Hanoverian/thoroughbred stallion and mare and an Appaloosa gelding.

The Millers are in partnership with Bob's father and uncle. Bob is responsible for nearly every aspect of running the dairy and grain operation, all decision making on the farm and for growing, harvesting and storing the feed used on the farm, as well as securing any off farm feedstuffs.

Diane's first responsibility is the care and well being of their children. She also cares for the calves and younger replacement heifers. Filing, bookkeeping and invoicing customers are also her responsibility, as well as landscaping, gardening, mowing and filling in wherever needed.

Bob graduated from Rising Sun High School in 1980, and from the University of Delaware with a bachelor's degree in animal and plant science.

Diane graduated from C. Milton Wright High School in 1983 and from the University of Delaware in 1987 with a bachelor's degree in animal science. She completed one year of graduate studies in ruminant nutrition. The Millers have three children.

Diane and Bob are members of Zion Methodist Church. Bob is vice chairman of Maryland Ag Land Preservation Foundation and chairman of the policy and review committee. He is a 16-year member of Farm Bureau and an 18-year member of the Cavert Grange.

Bob, who has served on a variety of boards, is currently an alternate delegate for Sire Power and serves on the nominating committee for Central Md. Farm Credit. He is also a member of the Holstein and Guernsey Associations at the state and national levels.

Diane serves on the Extension Advisory Council, hosts farm tours for school classes and volunteers at county fairs. She is sponsoring several 4-H'ers in the dairy heifer lease program.

Diane is currently in the process of establishing a "Clover Club," a group geared toward 4- to 7-year-olds to serve as a stepping stone in 4-H. She will serve as group leader. She is a counselor for nursing mothers and also does some freelance writing.

Robert L. and Robin K. Rohrer

Robert L. (Bob) and Robin K. Rohrer of Washington Boro, operate a 592-acre, 750-head Holstein farm. Average annual production at Robert H. Rohrer & Sons Farm is 22,300 pounds of milk and 760 pounds of fat on 690 cows. Crops include corn, hay and rye. They also finish 3,600 hogs per year.

The Rohrer's farm is a partnership owned by his parents, with Bob responsible for breeding, herd health, herd production, buying of supplies and equipment and the work schedule. Robin is responsible for all financial records, paying bills and payroll. She helps with the quarterly and year-end reports and taxes. Robin also takes care of weekly cleaning for offices, lunchrooms, restrooms, etc., and helps with bST bi-weekly.

Organic Dairy Farmers Say It's A Better Life

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Dairy farmers producing for the organic milk market face lower input costs and higher premiums for their milk, but it isn't a panacea for the woes of maintstream dairying.

What is apparently gained in profitability is balanced against a number of risks associated with producing under the rules of organic farming, as set by the Organic Crop Improvement Association (OCIA).

The reason that antibiotics were developed was to fight life-threatening disease. They cannot be used in organic dairying. If a cow absolutely requires antibiotics to live, she can be given them, but then she must be shipped off.

The reason pesticides were developed out of military-use technologies wasn't just to provide a strong non-military income for the chemical manufacturing companies.

They were developed because pests can devastate crops, facilities, businesses, and potentially entire sectors of industries.

However, they can also create "monster" pests, as it were, that are resistant to known or legal pesticides.

They cannot be used in organic farming.

The reason agricultural hormones were developed wasn't just to to provide an outlet for a medical technology developed out of curiosity.

They were developed and used by agriculturalists in nations with high average standards of living as a means of producing more at a lower cost to make up the cost of maintaining that standard of living, while at the same time attempting to compete with imported goods from nations with relatively low standards of living.

They are also used to gain greater market share and cash flow in domestic competition.

Hormones cannot be used in organic farming.

In essense, if a soil amendment, a food additive, a medical treatment, or a pest control is comprised of a complex manmade chemical, it can't be used.

But then again, the rules aren't that hard and fast.

The USDA is expected to promulagate regulations for certification of "organic" production, but when that happens isn't known. In the meantime, organic organizations have formed and created their own regulations.

The "organic" milk market is beginning to grow in southeastern Pennsylvania, though it isn't expected that mainstream dairying will diminish because of the competition.

The organic farmers who supply the recently established processing and retail markets are small in number and relative production, but theirs is a personal choice of production that seems to mirror somewhat the personal choice of their consumer.

This is the last in a series of articles that attempts to look at the current state of organic dairying and entreprenuerialship in Pennsylvania through the Natural Dairy Products Corp. headquartered in West Grove, Chester County.

The series began with Ned and Susan MacArthur of West Grove, in Chester County, who along with Ned's father Norman, and business partner Gary Comstock created Natural Dairy Products Corp.

Natural Dairy Products Corp. was formed as a management company that is currently involved with eight producers who are certified organic dairy producers under the Organic Crop Improvement Association certification rules.

A local chapter of OCIA was formed to oversee the certification process.

A local certification committee comprised of organic dairy producers, a dairy processor, and a retailer of organic dairy products reviews applications. Inspections and on-farm evaluations are conducted by an inspector from the international OCIA organization, headquartered in Bellefontaine, Ohio.

That inspector's report is considered by the local certification board and the application rejected or accepted.

Certification requires an annual inspection and review. Maintaining certificaiton requires a solid paper trail of the milk back to the farm. For crops, the trace is back to the field.

Natural Dairy Products Corp. also works in cooperation with Sunnydale Dairy in New York and both work with a common organic milk processor, Longacre's Modern Dairy Inc., located along Rt. 100, in Barto, Berks County.

Sunnydale markets Natural By Nature organic milk in New York and north, while Natural Dairy Products Corp. sells the Natural By Nature brand in Pennsylvania and south of New York.

Dairy farmers involved in organic dairying, in general, have been practicing intensive grazing and/or low-input farming to try to keep capital and equipment requirements down, and thus return rates higher.

But some of these farmers said they have been trending away from using many chemicals for many reasons — they require extra capital for purchase, for storage, for application, and for risk.

Having harsh, toxic chemicals on the farm can present not only a risk to neighbors, who have to be notified if they are sensitive to chemicals, and to farm workers, who have to be warned in English and Spanish that a field has been sprayed, but to the children of the farm family.

And while civil lawsuits continue to be the exception from the agricultural community, they are commonplace among the rest of the population.

For some or all of these reasons, organic dairy farming can offer an alternative dairying practice.

But it is not always attractive, and it is not for everybody.

Because it can take three years of applying higher-management/ increased risk organic farming techniques before qualifying to sell milk through the organic market, the return on investment is delayed.

Until certified, the lower production that is generally associated with not using all the chemical technologies available results in a drop in farm-gate cash flow.

It can take years for a field to properly respond to organic techniques which stress building up the carbonaceous (organic) material in the soil that binds with nitrogenous materials, retains moisture, and increases the aerobic qualities of arable land.

Crop rotations for pest control are mandatory, and there are to be no use of chemical fertilizers. Green and animal manures (organic animal manure can be spread directly, non-organic animal manure has to be composted first) and legumes are key to delivering plant nutrients to the soil.

The goal is to create a farm that is multi-dimensional in aspect.

The thinking is different.

Soil is not considered a clay-based medium, that, when ground to a proper particle size, seeded, and treated with fertilizers and water at regular intervals, brings forth a proper crop.

Organic soils are considered mediums that host a range of microbes and macroinvertibrates that interact to provide an optimum medium for the growth of healthy plants.

Organic is farming to produce the best through natural selection (culling), instead of coddling weak and marginal plants or animals in the hopes of getting a few extra dollars at market time.

According to Dave Martin, chairman of the local OCIA review committee, after organic farming for several years, his corn yields aren't what they could be if he used chemicals, but he said he has seen improvement in yield and response to organic treatments. He said he expects that he will see continued improvements as his soils improve in tilth and organic material.

Martin and his wife Robbin and 10 children (oldest 17) live at Dande Farm located southwest of Lititz, in the rural postal route Manheim area.

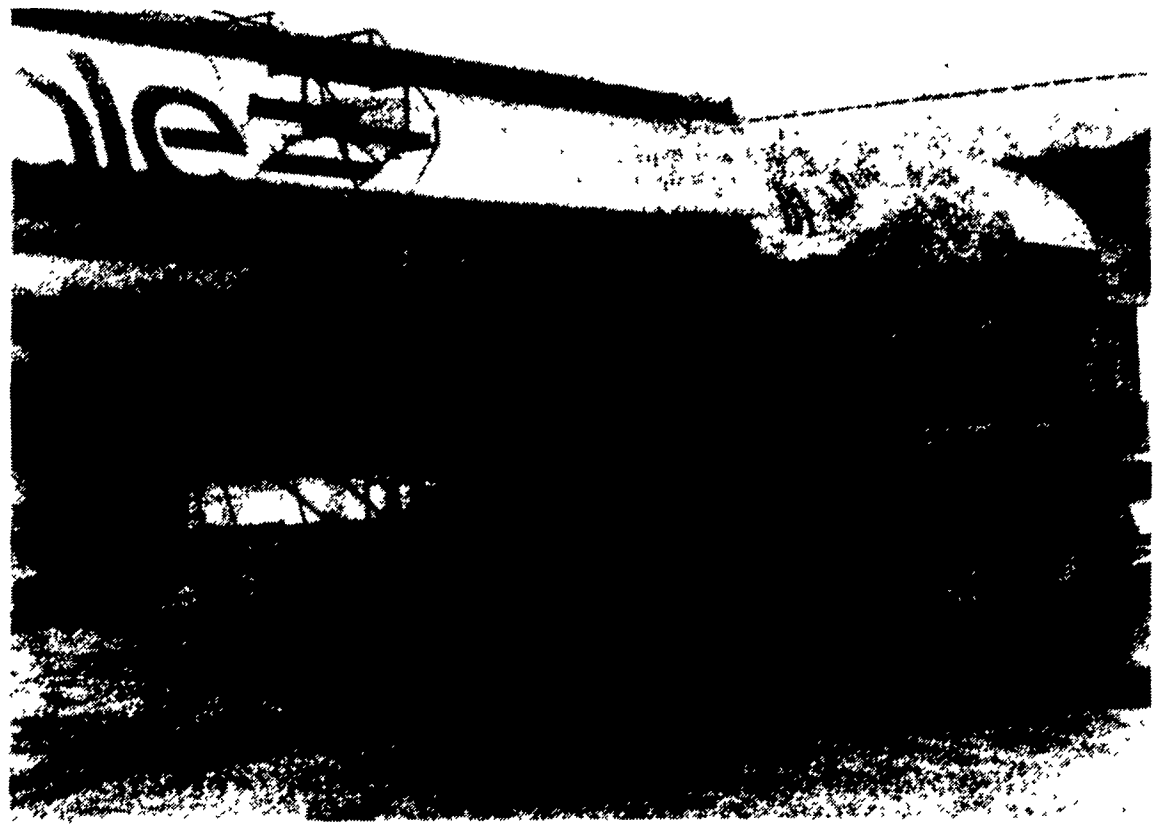
The farm sign has his name and his father's, though his father has a non-organic poultry operation on adjacent land to the 160-acre organic dairy farm.

He said that is because his father, Dan, is part of his heritage and part of the farm. It is a family operation.

Though his father never was involved in organic farming, his maternal grandfather was. His grandfather grew organic vegetables and had a ready market.

However, organic farming has changed since then. But Dave said he must have inherited his interest in organic farming from his grandfather.

One of the eight producers currently with Natural Dairy Products Corp., Martin milks 71 cows, mostly Holsteins. It is primarily a closed herd. Dave has two Dutch-belted crossbred cows he got by purchasing semen, but he also purchased six Jersey heifers to add to the milking string.



From the left, Dave Martin and son Joshua welcome the milk truck as it picks up another load of organic milk from their Manheim area farm.

Dutch-belted cows — black and white, but the fore and aft are black and the middle white, like a Hampshire pig — have been promoted by some in the Mid-West as ideal animals for intensive grazing. Those are experience claims and are not supported by university research.

A closed herd is preferable for several reasons, but mainly because after so long, there develops a "herd immunity" system.

After several years, a herd can become resistant through natural immunity to certain diseases that they are exposed to on the farm.

An apparently healthy cow introduced to the rest of the herd may be actually carrying a disease for which she is immune, but for which the herd is not.

That can wreak havoc for a time, until the herd struggles through adapting to the new disease through building up their own immunities.

With colostrum and a closed herd, young stock are more likely to develop immunities to diseases specific to a herd, and thus, as long as no new disease is introduced, they will remain healthy.

The colored breeds were added to see how they would fit in to the operation and because Dave knew the seller well enough to know that they were healthy animals and did not reasonably pose a threat to his main herd.

Dave said he used to ship about 7,600 pounds and every spring ship every day. Now he ships about 6,600 pounds.

While an audit of the accounting for the farm wasn't available to compare profit margins for any of the organic farmers, what was impressive is that they said they are optimistic, happy, and making more money than producing and selling milk under the mainstream system.

Up until they started receiving the organic premium, however, times were tough, according to Martin. He said that without Ned MacArthur's undying optimism and pep talks, he may have given up.

One of the first things he experienced was a drop in production and income. The cost of feeding all organic grain and feed and not receiving a premium was risky. He said that MacArthur helped them continue along.

Now, they receive $19 per hundredweight, and they get the opportunity to have a say in how much they receive.

Of course, they still have to be reasonable. The retailer takes his profit margin no matter what the cost of production, he said. And that can mean that a small jump in farm price translates to a much higher consumer price.

So they can't just have the price they want, without considering the competition. Because competition is there. A Mid-Western cooperative has been seeking area organic producers to sign on. A Boulder, Colorado organic dairy corporation has been marketing its product nationwide.

But Martin said the advantage he and the rest have is that the milk is very fresh to market, processed well, and flavorfull (a lot of colored breed milk and grasses fed).

Their customers seek that.

Martin and the others producing for Natural Dairy Products Corp. readily admit they are not experts.

The sense is that no one ever becomes expert at organic farming, the farm gets better as the farmer understands more of what is going on.

To Martin, organic farming is fun. After dairy farming traditionally for 35 years, he said he really enjoys this style of dairying.

It's slow going to advance, he said, because one experience on the farm equates to one year. So in 10 years, there are only 10 "experiences" he said.

But in it all, accepting the risk of losing their current position in life is the biggest challenge that all people involved have had to be willing to accept.

For the most part, the acceptance of that risk came from understanding what they wanted for themselves, what they had to lose, how well they could adapt to learning new and different practices, and how strong was their belief that the goal of taking the risk was the right thing to pursue.

School of Veterinary Medicine
UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA

Biotechnology and Sperm

DR. ALAN M. KELLY
The Gilbert S. Kahn
Dean of Veterinary Medicine
University of Pennsylvania

It is nearly 50 years since James Watson and Francis Crick determined the molecular structure of DNA and set the stage for the "molecular revolution" in biology and medicine! Now we witness, almost daily, dramatic advances in the understanding and treatment of human disease. But that is just the tip of the iceberg; the molecular revolution is beginning to influence many other aspects of our lives, including the way our food is produced.

Molecular genetics and biotechnology have already been applied to genetically engineered crops. Most of these plants have been designed for increased disease resistance, so there is real hope that they will help increase world food supplies to meet the needs of growing populations.

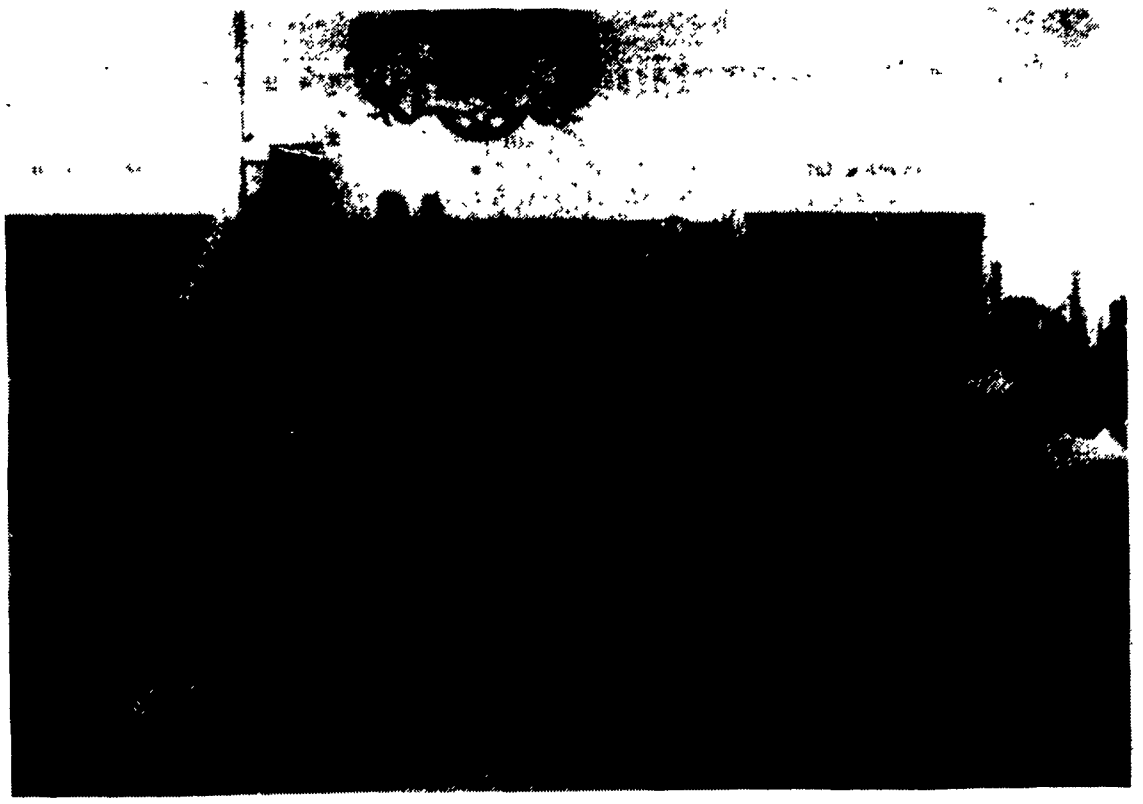
Unfortunately, we cannot claim the same success for animal agriculture. The application of molecular techniques to confer disease resistance and increase the productivity of farm animals is currently extremely limited and uneconomic. But if farmers involved in animal agriculture are to have practical benefits, we must develop rapid and efficient methods for genetically modifying characteristics of pigs, sheep, cattle, and chickens. Ultimately, American agriculture must rely more than ever on biotechnology if we are to remain competitive in the world economy. And, of course, this biotechnology-dependent agriculture is critical to the Pennsylvania economy.

The University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine is committed to developing more powerful techniques of genetic manipulation of agricultural animals to meet the needs of American agriculture. The School has established the Center for Animala Transgensis and Germ Cell Research — the first in the nation — whose primary mission is to improve the health and productivity of domestic animals by modification of the animals' genetic makeup. The School of Veterinary Medicine has already obtained substantial private seed money for the Center for Animal Transgenesis and Germ Cell Research. Laboratories (already under construction) and much of the research will be located at the School's New Bolton campus in Chester County.

The work of the Center's Principal Scientist, Dr. Ralph Brinster, has recently received international attention and recognition. Dr. Brinster, the Richard King Mellon Professor of Reproductive Physiology, has been able to take spermatogonia, the "stem cells that give rise to sperm in the testis," from a rate and implant them into a mouse — creating a mouse that produced rat sperm. This intriguing experiment introduces the possiblity that the mouse could be used as a surrogate to grow genetically altered farm animal sperm. In another experiment involving just mice, Dr. Brinster took "spermatogonical cells," froze them for months, reimplanted them in male mice, and found that they were viable and able to produce sperm. This process provides a potential way to preserve and extend the complete genetic makeup of valuable liveestock by freezing testicular cells with the expectation that they will generate sperm at a later date.

The work at the Center for Animal Transgenesis and Germ Cell research offers the prospect of introducing desirable new genes into sperm cells and transplanting these cells into the testis of an animal, where sperm will be produced that carry the altered genetic information and contribute the genes to new offspring. Once a genetic change is introduced into the germ line by transgensis, it is carried forward forever from generation to generation. Thus, it will be possible to introduce and maintain genetic changes that improve the health and productivity of farm animals.

Scientists at the Center will continue to discover new fundamental knowledge about cell biology and genetic exchange and apply the techniques of germ-line modification to accelerate the rate at which livestock can be genetically improved, a goal that most farmers have been pursuing by other means. This exciting new development will advance Pennsylvania's animal industry, the largest sector of the Commonwealth's agriculture, which, in turn, is Pennsylvania's leading industry.



This Excellent-93 Curtis-Haven Profit Lola cow with an Excellent mammary, consigned by Donald Eaton of Blairsville, is the first lot in the Pennsylvania Showcase Sale. She sold for $5,300. Eaton retained rights to show her Friday. The sale results and coverage of the Pa. Holstein Spring Championship Show are to be reported in the next issue of Lancaster Farming.

Agri-Businesses Support Dairy Farmers

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) — Sixty concerned business people and farmers gathered last week at Binghams Restaurant, Susquehanna County to determine what further actions business people may pursue to help correct the low milk prices paid to dairy farmers.

All three County Commissioners from Susquehanna County, Lee Smith, Cal Dean and Jeff Loomis were present and presented a solid front behind the dairy farmers efforts. Commissioner Norm Miller and Mrs. Miller from Sullivan County attended the session. In addition Mr. Rickard was present representing the County Commissioners from Wayne County.

Letters that have been sent to Washington were read from some of the County Commisioners and Dr. Douglas Caucci, a veterinarian from Wayne County also read a letter.

Several feed dealers, supply dealers, bankers, insurance men, and implement dealers were also present.

Bill Lopatofsky, owner and operator of Northeast Equipment, from West Clifford stated, "It's time that dairy farmers take control of their own destiny and price the milk correctly at the Farm."

Arden Tewksbury, Manager of Pro Ag pointed out to the group that if something isn't done to improve prices to dairy farmers, then the total economic loss to the State of Pennsylvania will be nearly 1.9 billion dollars in a year's time from October 1996 thru October 1997.

Breaking these figures down on a local level, Pro Ag estimates the farms' loss in gross income for the same period of time will be nearly $7.4 million in Susquehanna County, $5.4 million in Wayne County, $2.3 million in Wyoming County, $1.2 million in Lackawanna County and $1 million in Sullivan County.

However, many of the people present were surprised to learn of the staggering potential economic losses in individual counties. They are - Susquehanna County $52 million, Wayne Co. $38 million, Wyoming Co. $16 million, Lackawanna Co. $8 million and Sullivan Co. $7 million.

Everyone agreed that an accelerated effort had to be made, with letter writing and phone calls to Washington D.C., in an attempt to return prices paid to dairy farmers equal to the September level of 1996.

Cow/Calf Conference

OTTUMWA, Iowa — For the first time in 26 years, a representative from the retail section of the beef industry spoke to cow/calf producers and industry representatives at the Ottumwa Cow/Calf Conference.

The Ottumwa Cow/Calf Conference was held Feb. 22 and attracted almost 650 cow/calf producers and industry representatives, according to Byron Leu, Iowa State University Extension livestock field specialist.

The conference was cosponsored by ISU Extension and the Ottumwa Chamber of Commerce.

Mike Johnson, assistant vice president of meat operations for Hy-Vee, said retail marketing of beef has seen many changes over the years.

"Today's consumer buying trends have customers demanding leaner cuts of meat with their healthier food habits. Ground beef movement trends best explain this," Johnson said.

In ground beef purchases the past five years, consumers have purchased more 85 percent lean and 90 percent lean ground beef, while 73 percent lean showed the biggest drop.

In recent years, there were many inconsistencies in the beef products Hy-Vee received from packers. The quality beef produced was used by packers for their own specialty programs.

In response, Hy-Vee developed the Blue Ribbon Beef program. Hy-Vee not only looked at marbling and maturity of beef, but also looked at conformation and genetics of cattle.

Seventeen organizations were approved for a total of $300,400 in matching funds. The applicants, state matching grant amounts, and project descriptions include:

J. Loren and Wanda Yoder stand at the Russian border near Kirkenes, above the Artic Circle.

Dairy Farmers Visit Land Of The Midnight Sun

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — The Land of the Midnight Sun reaches up through the Arctic Circle, over Sweden and Finland to touch the very northwestern tip of the Soviet Union. It's cold in northern Norway. But not too cold to keep J. Loren and Wanda Yoder of Belleville, Mifflin County, from visiting their former exchange student's homeland.

Ingebjorg Olsen stayed with the Yoders on their 60-cow dairy farm as a 16-year-old exchange student in 1983. That Christmas, because she was a bit homesick, Ingebjorg jogged Mifflin County's back roads in zero degree weather as the Yoders wondered how she could do it. Now they understand!

"In Norway, we woke every morning to temperatures below zero," J. Loren says of their experience.

J. Loren and Wanda Yoder's plane touched down in Oslo, Norway, in March of 1996. Met at the airport by Ingebjorg's sister, because Ingebjorg was living in the United States, the Belleville couple spent three weeks visiting Norway, Germany, Finland and the Soviet Union.

After staying three days in Oslo, Norway's capital city, they traveled to Lillehammer to visit the Olympic sites. At Lillehammer, they toured each Olympic event site and experienced the breathtaking view from atop the ski high jump. After that, they flew to the northern-most part of Norway to Kirkenes, Ingebjorg's hometown. While waiting for their flight, Soviet Union President Yeltzin flew in, escorted at each wing tip by fighter aircraft.

"They live three miles from the Soviet border. In Kirkenes, some people repair ships in the shipyard for a living. Some haul lumber into the Soviet Union. One day, we crossed the border to visit the town of Nikel in the Soviet Union. There's a big nickel mine there. We had to go through two sets of gates with armed guards at each one."

After being checked out by the guards, the group traveled on to the heavily polluted city of Nikel.

"There were two huge smokestacks from the factory. The trees around the city were small. Life expectancy for the people there wasn't too high," J. Loren remembers. "No one ever smiled. There wasn't much food in the grocery stores and the beef I saw looked black. I wouldn't want to have eaten it!

Even in Norway, they said what didn't get eaten at a meal went back into the pot! We didn't eat out at restaurants too much while we were there! We did eat a lot of seafood, like salmon, and meals prepared in their homes."

In Germany, J. Loren and Wanda were reunited with dairy farm friends who had lived with them in the United States. The Yoders had taken them to area farms, including an Amish farm. One woman, a hog farmer at the time, sent pictures of the Amish back to Germany. Her family wondered where she had gotten all those "old" pictures of horse-and-buggies! The German dairy farmers, the Yoders learned during their visit, each milk around 100 cows.

J. Loren recalls an amusing story while eating at a German McDonald's. "The one farmer with us had just sold a beef cow for 58 Deutsche mark. That was when the mad cow scare was going on in Europe. A few days later, we went to a McDonald's. The bill came to 62 Deutsche mark. The farmer with us said, "We just ate the whole cow!"

"They treated us like royalty," Wanda exclaims. "I love to visit other countries, just to be with the families and to do the things they do and eat what they eat. I enjoy having exchange students. There's so much we learn from them — their different customs, what holidays they celebrate. The Germans have close families and a lot of community pride. We couldn't have gone if it wouldn't have been for our son Craig."

Because of Craig taking over the farm chorse while they were traveling, Wanda and J. Loren were able to enjoy Norweigan reindeer sleigh rides and, to a lesser degree, 140-mile-per-hour rides on the Autobahn. Traveling abroad is their way of bringing the "exchange student experience" full circle.

Loren Yoder reviews pictures of his and his wife's trip to Norway. The Yoders milk 60 Holsteins on their 125-acre home along Maple Grove Road in Belleville.

"I'd go back to Norway just for the hard rolls and yogurt," Loren said.

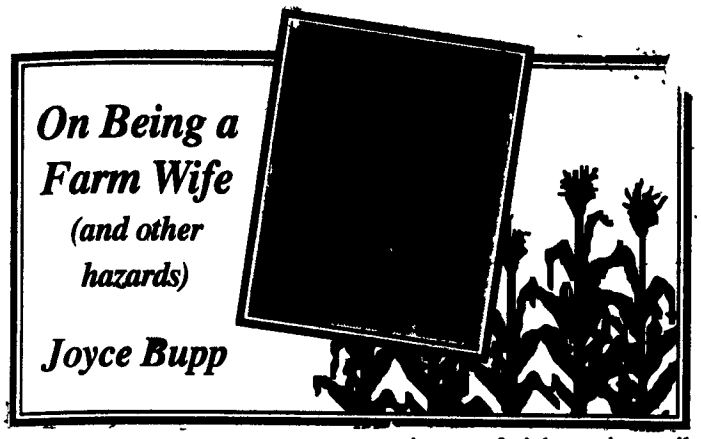
HOMESTEAD NOTES



The timing is most appropriate.

Can you imagine celebrating Easter during the dead of winter? Or at harvest time?

And you don't want to even think about stepping on one of those colored, hard-boiled eggs that got lost during an annual Easter Egg hunt in ... July. Yuck.

As fortune has it, our corner of the world observes the Eastertime renewal of Christian spirituality hand-in-hand with the renewal of life around us. Just as we feel almost unbearably weary of the brownness and drabness of winter, Mother Nature unveils her annual blessing of fresh, new greenery and bursts of bright color.

Few items capture the spirit of the season of renewal better than the death-to-life promise encapsulated in a flower bulb.

A boxful of bulbs arrived in our mailbox last fall, a birthday gift sent from the other side of the country. Along with some other surprises in the package was an assortment of tulip bulbs, daffodil bulbs, and hyacinth bulbs — a gift box of promises.

One bright fall afternoon, with a chill in the air and hints of worse to come, I potted up the assorted promises. Groups of four or five daffodils, or a half-dozen tulips, or a single hyacinth were tucked into a mixture of rich potting soil in appropriately-sized pots. Then, the pots were all thoroughly watered and set outside to drain well, so the soil would be damp but not soggy.

For a week or two before, I'd been saving the cardboard cases from the individual paper towels we use to wash and dry the cows' udders prior to milking. A couple of assorted sized pots went into each box, making them easier to move around and handle. Then, over, under and around the pots went a thorough packing of Mother Nature's own organic, biodegradable, insulating material — scoops of the dried maple leaves that were piling up in the yard.

Ultimately, the bulbs were to be stored through the winter in the ground cellar, where they would develop growth slowly in refrigerator-like conditions. But, the ground cellar was still pretty warm, and I was concerned they would root and send up tops too quickly.

So, the boxes of potted bulbs instead were stacked temporarily in the woodshed. In that unheated, but somewhat sheltered, environment they would begin to root and develop much the same as if they were planted in the ground. Ideally, the leaf insulation would prevent them from freezing if the temperatures were to suddenly go Arctic.

The "plan" was to leave them in the woodshed only for a couple of weeks, then as the season grew colder, move them to the ground cellar for the rest of the winter.

Except that I sort of forgot that they were there. And didn't remember until weeks later — and several days into one of the few stretches of winter's really bitter weather we experienced. Hoping for the best, I dug through one boxful of leaves and found that the top of the soil in each pot was just slightly frozen. A couple of quick wheelbarrow-trips later, the boxes of potted promises had been promptly hustled to safer storage. Underground.

A few weeks ago, another check down through the boxes of leaves unearthed vigorous foliage sprouting out of the pots of daffodils. Again, they got a hasty move. This time, it was to the cool floor of the greenhouse, where the foliage could "green up" before the bud stalks began appearing. By last week, the hyacinths and tulips were likewise begging to be let out into the spring sunshine.

Professional growers scheduled their bulbs with infinite planning and care. Extremely cold and/or extremely dark, dreary weather can play havoc with the scheduling of bringing Easter bulbs to bloom. But growers must have their pots of flowers at blooming peak within a few day schedule — or lose the crop. Thanks to their skills, we have lovely Easter potted plants to celebrate this blessed holiday with blooms that remind us that new life arises from what appears to be dead.

And — for those of us who unwittingly stumble through the whole process and still get lucky enough to have blooms forced on time for Easter — thanks to a forgiving Mother Nature.

Good thing she looks after us forgetful types.

Check Out Olympics On State Tax Form

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Pennsylvania taxpayers can do more than cheer from their living room couches to support America's Olympic athletes training for the 1998 Olympic Winter Games in Nagano, Japan. By filling in the appropriate line on their state income tax returns, Pennsylvanians can donate part or all of their state tax refunds to the United States Olympic Committee.

Funds generated by the Pennsylvania Olympic Tax Check-off will help equip, train and lodge thousands of athletes in Pennsylvania and across the United States who are training intensely for a berth on the 1998 U.S. Olympic Team.

Robert H. Campbell, Mid-Atlantic Regional Fund Raising Chairman for the U.S. Olympic Committee, points out that Olympic hopefuls require extensive financial support.

"Estimates show that it takes as much as $50,000 a year to train a world-class skater and more than a million dollars to equip an ice hockey team," Campbell says. "In addition, many athletes spend their life's savings on Olympics-related expenses and that is a compelling point for finding an alternative means of fund raising like the tax check-off program."

Furthermore, the U.S. Olympic effort is entirely dependent on private contributions. "The U.S. Olympic Committee is one of the few national Olympic committees in the world that does not receive continuing financial assistnace from the federal government. The voluntary check-off is a convenient way for Pennsylvanians to make a donation to the U.S. Olympic Team and to add their support to the efforts of corporations, foundations, civic groups and other private citizens statewide," adds Campbell.

Pennsylvania is one of eleven states with a "check-off" provision on its individual income tax form. The others are Arkansas, Colorado, Delaware, Idaho, Kentucky, Louisiana, Massachusetts, New York, Rhode Island and Virginia.

Chef Tell To Teach At Berks Extension Workshop

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — "Cooking Up a Whole New You" is the theme of the Spring Awareness Day, sponsored by the Pennsylvania State University Cooperative Extension of Berks County.

The sessions will be conducted Thursday, May 1, from 9:00 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in the Berks County Agricultural Center, Bern Township. Chef Tell's program will be repeated at 7:00 p.m. His appearance is partially funded by UGI Utilities, Inc. The program is open to the public and men are encouraged to attend.

Highlights of the program will include speakers on topics of current concern:

•In The Kitchen With Chef Tell. Do you want to learn the secrets of preparing a gourmet meal in a matter of minutes? The highly decorated Master Chef Tell Erhardt will perform culinary magic at Awareness Day — just like he does on his culinary television program — with humor and a unique ability to simplify even the most difficult recipe.

Internationally known Chef Tell is a restaurateur and cookbook author as well as a television celebrity, who will take the fear out of cooking by making it simple and fun. He will demonstrate food preparation techniques, shortcuts, garnishes, and easy recipes using only a few ingredients, so that consumers will try them at home.

The fast-talking, German-born culinarian has achieved national recognition through is appearances on evening "PM Magazine," "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous," "LIVE with Regis and Kathie Lee," as well as TNN.

•A Bad Mood — Or Is It Something Else? Dr. Larry A. Rotenberg, MD, Director of Psychiatry at the Reading Hospital & Medical Center will talk about depression — a common but treatable medical condition that puts men, women, teens and the elderly at risk, and is often one of the least acknowledged. Learn to recognize the warning signals and the symptoms that will help you understand the difference between general moodiness and depression. Dr. Rotenberg will dispel the myths of depression and present the latest information on the causes of depression and the effective modern treatments that will minimize the disability and prevent disruption of the individual's social and occupational functioning. Come and learn where to get help and ways to convince a depressed individual and/or family member to seek help, which will improve the quality of life for everyone in your home.

•Gardening for Small Places. Pat Magala, Penn State Berks County Master Gardener, will show how hanging baskets and container plantings can allow you to garden in small places. A strawberry pot and a hanging basket will be planted from start to finish so that you can learn some simple steps to enjoy gardening in small places. Quick and easy techniques for using both herbs and flowers will be shared.

•You Want to Talk About — What? The word "massage" can mean different things to different people, depending on your frame of reference. Amanda Millar, Nationally Certified Massage Therapist, who helped train the British Olympic athletes, will present the facts and fallacies about massage. Come and learn how massage can rub you the right way and how it can combine with other prescribed health care, whether it be for injury, stress or relaxation. Ms. Millar will discuss the different types of massage; what a therapist is and isn't and will answer all your questions like — what to wear or not to wear when going for a massage!

Reservations will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis and are due by April 17. Daytime cost is $10 for luncheon and the program. Make check payable to: Berks County Extension Special Account and send to Mary Binkley, 234 N. Galen Hall Road, Wernersville, PA 19565.

Consuming Thoughts

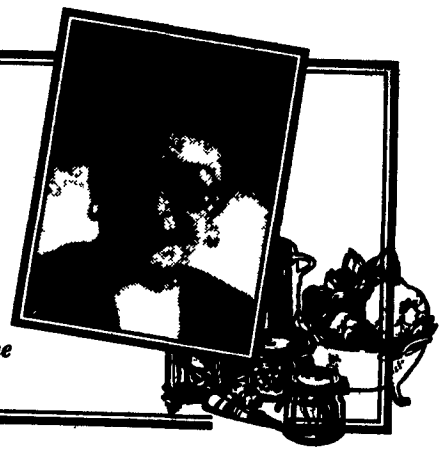
Fay Strickler

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.



Do you have a child who has a finicky appetite. If so, don't be discouraged because many families have at least one child who's choosy about his or her food. This child may be finicky about all food or just one kind.

Trying to plan meals and snacks can be a parent's nightmare. Teaching children to eat foods that are not only nutritious but from all Five Food Groups can be a great learning experience for both you and your child.

Each food group carries important nutrients that are not found in large amounts in the other food groups. Eating a variety of foods also means that you select different kinds of foods from within each group.

Children tend to get into favorite food ruts. If your child doesn't eat a variety of foods, he/she may miss out on a variety of nutrients for growth, energy, and heatlh.

The nutrients your child (and you) need are in the Five Food Groups. Every day, try to include these foods. The portion size will vary depending on the age of the child.

Food Groups:	Examples:
Grains (6-11 servings a day)	Rice, pasta, breads, noodles, tortillas, popcorn, hot and cold cereals, muffins, pancakes, crackers, taco shells, pizza crust.
Vegetables (3-5 servings a day)	Potatoes, corn, lettuce, tomatoes, tomato sauce, peppers, broccoli, carrots, cabbage, sweet potatoes, squash, peas.
Fruits (2-4 servings a day)	Apples, bananas, oranges, peaches, grapes, strawberries, melons, raisins, juices.
Meat (2-3 servings a day)	Beef, pork, chicken, turkey, fish, peanut butter, nuts, eggs, beans, lentils, tofu.

Another way to get the variety of the Five Food Groups is to use combination foods such as: a taco: beef (meat), lettuce and tomato (vegetables), cheese (dairy), and a taco shell (grain); beef stew: beef (meat), carrots, potatoes and onions (vegetables).

Notice that the above list does not include any sugar, fat, oil, gravy, salad dressing, syrup, candy, mayonnaise, whipped cream, soda, pastry, cake, pie, jelly, maragarine or butter. These are extra foods that add calories (energy) and flavor to our meals, but have little nutritional value. These should be included in small amounts in addition to the foods from the Five Food Groups. Children who eat these foods instead of some of the Five Food Groups may have poor nutrition.

Often parents try too hard to introduce new foods into their child's diet. Children aren't always involved in preparing meals and might not show an interested in food. Allowing children to help with meal time can lead to an increased interest in foods.

Involving children in the kitchen and with other food activities can make them feel special. Not only will you be a great teacher at home, but a great role model for your child. It's the perfect opportunity for both of you to spend quality time together and learn about foods, cooking and much more.

You might want to visit your local library, where you can find many books on foods, nutrition and cooking. You'll be able to find these books in both the children and the adult section. Many contain information on how foods grow, fun food facts, questions children may ask about food, food related activities and children's recipes.

Meal planning doesn't need to become a hassle. Involve your children in the decision making process. Bring them food shopping, include them in food discussions, let them set the table, or peel and clean the vegetables.

Food choices will teach them about nutrition and give them some sense of control. The best part is that they'll carry this positive creative learning experience and information with them for the rest of their lives.

Candy Making Is Sweet Process

The national Confectioners Association estimates that $875 million worth of candy will be enjoyed on Easter making it the third higest-selling confectionery holiday behind Halloween and Christmas. In addition to 13.5 billion jelly beans that will be produced this holiday, children will hunt for 50 to 60 million foil-wrapped eggs, marshmallow chicks, and other personal favorites.

Candy isn't difficult to make if you try these recipes.

KRISPIE PEANUT BUTTER EGGS

3 cups rice crispy cereal, crushed
2 cups peanut butter
½ cup butter, melted
1 pound powdered sugar
Coating milk chocolate

Mix all ingredients together in bowl. Shape into egg shape with hands, about one inch long. Stick with a fork and dip into hot melted milk chocolate. Place fork punctures down on a wax paper covered cookie sheet and refrigerate until milk chocolate is firm. Place in sealed containers and store in cool place or in freezer until ready to serve.

PEANUT CARAMEL CANDY

14-ounce package vanilla caramels
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons milk
1 cup chopped peanuts
1½ pounds dipping chocolate

Line an 8x8x2-inch baking pan with foil, extending foil over edges of pan. Butter foil; set aside pan. In heavy 1½ -quart saucepan combine caramels, butter, and milk. Cook over low heat, stirring occasionally until caramels are melted. Stir in chopped peanuts. Pour into prepared pan. Chill about one hour or until firm. When firm, use the foil to lift candy out of the pan. Cut candy into 2x1-inch rectangles. Melt the dipping chocolate in double broiler over hot but not boiling water. Dip candy into melted chocolate; let excess chocolate drip off candy. Place candy on waxed paper lined cookie sheets. Makes about 32 candies.

PEANUT FUDGE EGGS

¾ cup creamy peanut butter
2 tablespoons softened butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup sifted powdered sugar
1 tablespoon milk
½ cup chopped peanuts
2 cups semi-sweet chocolate chips
1 cup sweetened condensed milk

In a medium mixing bowl, stir together peanut butter and softened butter. Add powdered sugar, milk, and vanilla, stirring until well combined. Stir in peanuts. Shape the mixture into two rolls or individual eggs; set aside.

In saucepan, combine chocolate pieces and sweetened condensed milk. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until smooth. Remove saucepan from heat; turn chocolate mixture onto waxed paper. Divide mixture in half. Working on waxed paper, pat each half into a 10x4-inch rectangle. Place one peanut butter roll in the center of each chocolate mixture and around each of the peanut butter rolls; press seams to seal.

Wrap candy in waxed paper or clear plastic wrap. Chill for 2 hours or until firm. Unwrap and carefully cut rolls into ¼ -inch slices. Store in tightly covered container.

Homemade candies make delicious and lovely gifts. Before you begin candymaking, read the recipe thoroughly. There are several methods to successfully melt chocolate coating. You can use an electric skillet with the thermonstat set between off and warm; test temperature with hand — too hot for hand means it's too hot for the coating. Or, use a double boiler. Never melt coating on the stove. Heat water in bottom pan of double boiler, remove pan from stove, place pan with coating over hot water making sure bottom of the pan is not touching the water, stir gently while coating melts. If water needs to be reheated, do not put coating on the stove while reheating water. Or, use the microwave. When melting one pound coating, place in plastic bowl that does not retain heat in microwave (test this by heating bowl with water in microwave — water should be hot but not bowl). Heat on medium, 50 percent power for 60 seconds; stir; 30 seconds, stir. Continue this until soft lumps remain. Remove from microwave and stir during standing time.

Beef has always been a great source for protein, iron, zinc, and the B-vitamins. It's always been a favorite for taste.

Tammy Weaver of Pennsylvania Beef Council recently spoke at the Women in Agriculture Conference held in Chambersburg. She offered lots of tips on the quickest, easiest and healthiest ways to add beef to your diet.

Perhaps you missed her presentation, but you don't need to miss the recipes. The Beef Council has produced a cookbook, "Skinny beef" that contains more than 100 recipes. Most can be made in under 30 minutes, and many are one-dish meals. The cookbook is available through the Pa. Beef Council by calling (717) 939-7000 or write 1500 Fulling Mill Rd., Middletown, PA 17057.

If you're looking for great flavor, something special, try this recipe from the Beef Council.

BEEF SIRLOIN WITH OVEN-ROASTED VEGETABLES

3 pounds boneless beef top sirloin steak, cut 2 inches thick
3 cloves garlic, crushed
1½ teaspoons dried rosemary leaves, crushed
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 pounds new red potatoes
Vegetable cooking spray
3 medium red, yellow or green bell peppers, each cut into 8 wedges
3 medium onions, cut into 1-inch thick wedges

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Combine garlic, rosemary, salt and pepper; press half of mixture into both sides of beef steak. Add oil to remaining mixture; set aside.

Cut small potatoes in half; cut larger ones in quarters. In large bowl, add potatoes and ½ of oil mixture; toss to coat. Lightly spray a 15x10-inch jelly roll pan with cooking spray. Arrange potatoes in single layer in pan.

In same bowl, combine remaining vegetables and oil mixture; toss to coat. Place beef steak on rack in shallow roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer so bulb is centered in thickest part, not resting in fat. Do not add water. Do not cover. Arrange bell peppers and onions on rack around steak. Place potatoes in oven at the same time.

Roast steak and vegetables in 425 degree oven for 45 to 50 minutes until steak is rare to medium doneness and vegetables are tender. Stir potatoes halfway through cooking time. Remove steak when meat thermometer registers 135 degrees for rare, 155 degrees for medium. Let steak stand 10 minutes. Thick-cut steaks will continue to rise about 5 degrees in temperature to 140 degrees for rare, 160 degrees for medium.

Trim fat from steak. Carve steak crosswise into slices. Serve with vegetables. Makes 12 servings.

Life's Simple Pleasures

How often are we too busy, rushed and focused on achieving the "perfect" lifestyle, that we neglect to savor the many simple pleasures of life that could be enjoyed each day? My guess is that most of us could benefit from taking a moment to reflect on those daily experiences that truly bring us great joy and fulfillment. By taking the time to do so, we can gain a better understanding of our values as well as a greater appreciation for the simple daily experiences that mean the most to us.

Here is a list of 20 simple pleasures of life. Some are my own and some are others, but all represent special moments to be savored and appreciated.

1. Bake bread. Enjoy the aroma throughout the house.

2. Wear a hat, scarf, jewelry or perfume that you have had stashed away for a "special occasion." Consider every day a special occasion!

3. Eat by candlelight. Even soup and sandwiches will taste better.

4. Turn off the television. Enjoy charades, jigsaw puzzles, storytelling, ping pong, a family walk or a good game of Scrabble.

5. Spend one whole day in your pajamas without being sick.

6. On occasion, indulge yourself with ice cream, fine chocolates, flavored coffees or whatever foods you find most pleasurable. Moderation is the key!

7. Watch children at play. Spend time with children on their level.

8. Practice at least one act of kindness daily. Send an anonymous card to a friend, surprise someone with a special treat, or volunteer to help someone in need.

9. Drive through a covered bridge.

10. Experience the satisfaction that comes from a perfectly balanced checkbook.

11. Make something healthful to eat. Put on your favorite music and sit down to enjoy your meal.

12. Spend time with a friend who makes you laugh.

13. Savor the satisfaction that comes from completing a difficult task at work or at home. Take yourself out to your favorite place to celebrate.

14. Hold a newborn baby.

15. Enjoy nature. Watch the clouds go by, listen to a running stream, or feel the comforts of a warm breeze. Celebrate the arrival of spring!

16. Purchase inexpensive things that add a lot to your daily pleasure — potpourri, herbal tea, a new fluffy pillow, a soft bath mat, or a magazine subscription.

17. Get to know somebody who is uniquely different from you. Experience the pleasure that comes from learning about another culture or ethnic tradition.

18. Read an inspirational book or article. Let it inspire you to become more of the person you would like to be.

19. Experience the joy that compassion, tolerance, and forgiveness can bring.

20. Enjoy what you have today. If you keep waiting for everything in your life to be "perfect," the many simple pleasures will quickly pass you by!

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Sixty-five percent of the beef marketed through livestock auctions in Pennsylvania is dairy cull cows and dairy steers, estimates Tammy Weaver, director of industry relations for the Pennsylvania Beef Council. She said approximately one-third of the meat slaughtered for beef in the state is of dairy origin. Ms. Weaver spoke at the recent Women in Agriculture conference held here at the Holiday Inn.

The Beef Council is working in conjunction with the American Heart Association to get the word out to consumers about lean, nutritious beef. And it looks like consumers are getting the message. In a recent study commissioned by the council, 2,000 families kept food diaries for two weeks. When the data was analyzed, it was discovered that most people are right on track with their beef consumption as recommended by USDA, eating 2-3 servings per day.

Ms. Weaver, along with Barb Ford, M.P.H., a dietician with the Pennsylvania Beef Council, shared ideas for quick and easy beef recipes. Steaks are often the quickest and easiest way to add beef to your diet, according to Ms. Weaver, and grilling them can be a real timesaver. Never pierce the meat when grilling, use tongs instead of a fork to flip it, ". . . or you'll lose all the juices," she said.

"When you get to the bottom of your freezer, what's left? Chuck roasts and round steaks," said Ms. Weaver. If you want to marinate, use something with an acidic base, like vinegar, Italian salad dressing, or tomato sauce, she suggested,

"Don't marinate longer than overnight; it breaks the tissue down too much. If you want to marinate for flavor, go 15-20 minutes, for tenderness, between 3-6 hours," said the Beef Council representative. She also suggested cooking in a crock pot as an easy way to prepare some of the tougher cuts of meat.

"The challenge we have with a dairy animal, especially one with any age to it, is a lack of marbling," Ms. Weaver explained, Marbling adds tenderness and taste to meat. "If you have an old cow, your best bet may just be to put everything in hamburger."

Some staples she recommended keeping in the pantry to save time and add excitement to your beef cooking include recipe-ready tomatoes, brown gravy in a jar, canned beans like pinto and canned green chilies, instant rice, noodles and pasta of all shapes, jarred garlic, and minced dried onions.

The beef council has produced a cookbook, Skinny Beef, that contains over 100 recipes. Most can be made in under 30 minutes, and many are one-dish meals. The cookbook is available through the Pennsylvania Beef Council by calling (717) 939-7000 or write 1500 Fulling Mill Road, Middletown, PA 17057.

Alleyways are not required when using the Brown aerator, so there is a great reduction in space requirements. The aerator's reverse rotation works the material from the bottom up and to the side, assuring complete mixing and agitation. LOW MAINTENANCE: the aerator is a simple design, the principle as a material mover has been proven with over 30 years experience in practical application. The aerator is hydraulically driven and equipped with patented wearplates or paddles, both of which are easily replaced.

ANSWER — The Cunfers, Lehighton, wanted recipes for caramel or carmel popcorn. Thanks to Eileen Schuler, Fleetwood, for sending a recipe.

Microwave Caramel Popcorn

½ cup butter
¼ cup corn syrup
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon baking soda
3 regular-size bags popped microwave popcorn

Melt butter in covered 2-quart casserole. Add corn syrup, salt, and brown sugar. Cook in microwave oven on high power; boil for 2 minutes. Add baking soda, stir until foamy. Place popcorn in a brown grocery bag; pour brown sugar mixture over it and stir. Cook in microwave on high power for 1½ minutes; stir. Cook on high power 1½ minutes longer; stir. Cook on high power another 45 seconds to one minute. Check to make sure mixture is not burning. Spread over a cookie sheet to cool.

Here's a recipe from Cindy Korver, Gettysburg. Also, thanks to Geraldine Heiser, Lititz; Jeanette Martin, and others for similar recipes.

Caramel Popcorn

2¼ cup brown sugar
¾ cup white Karo
Pinch salt
1¼ cup butter

Melt butter, add sugar, Karo and salt. Boil 5 minutes. Pour over and mix with:

8 quarts popped corn

Put on cookie sheets and bake 1¼ hour at 200 degrees. Stir every ½ hour.

Cool. Break into desired sized chunks.

ANSWER — Diane Snyder, Rebuck, wanted to know if anyone has a recipe to make Fruit Leathers. Thanks to Jeanette R. Martin and another reader for sending the following recipes.

Fruit Leather

1 gallon apricots, peaches or nectarines
1½ cups unsweetened pineapple juice
Honey
3 teaspoons almond extract (optional)

Place the pitted fruit and pineapple juice in heavy pot, cover, and set over low heat, cook until soft. Drain off the juice well (the juice makes a good drink). Run the fruit through a blender or food mill, remove the skins if you prefer a smooth product or use the skins as part of the pulp for the leather. Sweeten to taste with honey and add extract. The pulp should be as thick as apple butter.

Spread on lightly oiled cookie sheets, ¼ -inch thick. Cover with a cheesecloth and place in a warm dry place to dry, it will take 1-2 weeks or place in oven. Turn control to 120 degrees and leave door slightly open to allow moisture to escape. When the leather is dry enough to be lifted, put on cake racks to dry on both sides. Dust the leather lightly with cornstarch or arrowroot powder when all stickiness has disappeared.

Apple Leather: 1 gallon apples, 1½ cups apple cider, honey, cinnamon, cloves or nutmeg added to taste.

Fruit Leather

Fruit leather uses overripe fruit. Blend in blender, flavor with 1 teaspoon honey and 1 teaspoon lemon juice for each 2 cups fruit pulp. Spread on plastic wrap scotch taped to the dry tray. Such fruits become a delicious fruit when dried.

Spread about ¼ -inch thick and a bit thicker around the edges. Dry 6-8 hours in dehydrator at 135 degrees. When thoroughly dy so that there is no stickiness to the touch, fruit resembles a thin leather. Store by rolling up in plastic and placing in a airtight container. Keep in cool dry place.

ANSWER — Robert Lloyd, Woodbury Heights, N.J., wanted a Pork Pie recipe. Thanks to Paul Dowie, Chester Springs, for sending one from "The Dairy Book of British Food."

Melton Mowbray Pork Pie

1 pound plain flour
Salt and pepper
1 egg yolk
6 ounces lard, diced
4 ounces milk and water mixed
2 pounds lean pork, diced in ¼ -inch cubes
3 bacon rashes, rinded and finely diced
1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh sage
1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh thyme
1 teaspoon anchovy essence
½ teaspoon ground mace
½ teaspoon ground allspice
1 pint chicken stock
1 egg, beaten, to glaze
½ ounce gelatine

To make the pastry, warm a mixing bowl and sieve the flour and a pinch of salt into it. Make a well in the center and add the egg yolk. Gently heat the lard in the milk and water until it melts, then bring rapidly to a boil. Pour immediately into the well in the flour and draw the ingredients together with a wooden spoon to form a soft pliable but not sticky ball of dough. Transfer to a lightly floured surface and knead until is is smooth and elastic and easy to work. Cover the dough and leave to rest in warm place for 20-30 minutes.

Mix together pork, bacon, sage, thyme, anchovy essence, and spices. Lightly season. Moisten with 3 tablespoons stock.

Roll out two thirds of the pastry on a lightly floured surface and mound round a 2½ -pound floured straight-sided jam jar or line a raised pie mould or dropsided terrine. If using a jar, leave the pastry to set on a baking sheet, then gently ease out the jar.

Pack the meat mixture into the pastry. Roll out the remaining pastry to make a lid for the pie. Press the edges together tightly to seal. Scallop the edges and decorate with pastry leaves. Cut a hole in the center of the pastry lid. Tie a double thickness of buttered greaseproof paper around the outside of the pie if formed using a jam jar. Brush the top with beaten egg. Place on a baking sheet if using amould or terrine.

Bake at 400 degrees for 20 minutes, reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake for additional 2¼ hours. Remove the mould or greaseproof paper, brush the sides and top with egg and return to oven for 10-15 minutes, until well browned. Remove from oven, leave until almost cold.

Heat the stock in a saucepan and sprinkle in the gelatine. Stir briskly until dissolved. Leave to cool slightly. Pour liquid through hole in pastry lid. Leave in a cool place overnight. Serve cut in thick slices.

Festival To Benefit Libraries

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The 1997 Turkey Hill Old-Fashioned Ice Cream Festival is scheduled for Sunday, July 20 from 1-5 p.m. at Lancaster Square, near the Brunswick Hotel in downtown Lancaster. Free parking will be available in the Prince Street Garage on the day of the festival. Turkey Hill Dairy will underwrite all festival expenses and donate ticket proceeds to the public libraries in Lancaster County. Proceeds will be used to purchase books and support programs for children at the 17 public libraries in the County.

The admission price entitles festival-goers to all the ice cream treats they can eat, plus entertainment and family-oriented activities ranging from dancers and demonstrations to music and hands-on activities. The festival will again feature the Great Ice Cream, Stack Up Contest and pony rides! Tickets for the festival are $5 for adults and youth ages 12 and over; $3 for youth ages 4-11; and children ages 3 and under are free when accompanied by an adult ticket holder. A $1 discount is offered on tickets purchased before the day of the festival. Tickets will be available at all public libraries in Lancaster County beginning May 1.

Each year a giant children's quilt is newly created and unveiled at the ice cream festival. This year more than 2,200 children in Lancaster County schools and Girl Scout troops are working on designs depicting children and books. Local 4-H Clubs will sew the pieces together to form the giant children's quilt. Material for the children's quilt has been donated again by The Old Country Store in Intercourse. The first giant children's quilt of 1995 has been disassembled, sewn into crib-sized quilts, and distributed to needy children through the Mennonite Central Committee. Last year's quilt is currently in this process.

Festival-goers can buy a chance to win a beautiful hand-sewn, full-size quilt featuring a "Sailor's Compass" designed exlusively for the festival by nationally-recognized quilt designer Cheryl A. Benner and crafted by Lancaster County artisans. The design coincides with the theme for the Summer Library Program sponsored by the public libraries. Quilt chances will be available for $1 each or 6 for $5 at any public library in Lancaster County as of May 1.

Included among the ice cream cones, sundaes, and frozen yogurt, Turkey Hill will imprint its own style on the festival with special ice cream flavors and a variety of iced teas and Tea Coolers. Turkey Hill Dairy is the fifth largest frozen dessert brand in the United States.

Over the past 12 years the ice cream festival has raised a total of more than $153,000 for the public libraries of Lancaster County. Ice cream lovers from throughout Pennsylvania and bordering states traditionally converge on Lancaster for this event.

For more information and directions, call the Lancaster County Library at (717) 394-2651.

ANSWER — Shirley Schwoerer, Wysox, wanted a recipe to make Danish or puff pastry using a food processor. Thanks to Rhoda Conover, Gettysburg, who sent a recipe. She writes that rolling out the dough is quite detailed and is easier to do if you have illustrations, which appear in many cookbooks, to follow.

Puff Pastry For Food Processor

3 cups all-purpose flour
¼ cup frozen butter, cut in 1 tablespoon pieces
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup ice water
1½ cups cold butter, cut in 1 tablespoons pieces
½ cup flour

With metal blade in place, add 3 cups flour, frozen butter, and salt to the work bowl. Pulse until butter is cut into the flour, continue processing, adding ice water through feed tube until ball of dough forms. Remove and refrigerate for 30 minutes.

Prepare butter mixture for rolling between layers of pastry with the metal blade in place, add the cold butter and ½ cup flour to the work bowl. Process until butter begins to form a dough, 10-15 seconds. Do not over process or butter will become too soft. If necessary scrape mixture from side of work bowl once or twice during processing. Refrigerate 30 minutes in foil. Follow directions in any cookbook to roll out.

ANSWER — Susan Daniel of New Tripoli wanted a recipe for "Apea" cookies. Thanks to Louise Rapp, Easton, for sending one from her grandmother.

Apeas Cookies

2 cups sugar
1 cup butter
5 eggs
½ cup heavy cream
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon vanilla
4½ cups flour

Mix and chill. Roll out on flour surface. Bake until light brown.

This was a recipe from my grandmother. I always made them thick. They are like cakes and are very good dunked in coffee or hot water.

In the Christian faith, Easter celebrates the resurrection, or return to life, of Jesus Christ following His crucifixion. The Easter season celebrates the belief that, because Christ rose again after death, we too can receive new life beyond the grave.

Did you know most Christians celebrate Easter on the first Sunday after the first full moon following the first day of spring (in the Northern Hemisphere)?

Did you know Easter Island is a 47-square-mile island in the South Pacific Ocean. It lies about 2,300 miles west of Chile. A Dutch explorer discovered the island on Easter Sunday in 1722, naming it Easter Island. The island has been governed by Chile since 1888. About 2,000 people live on Easter Island.

Why do rabbits like carrots?
Bunnies love to munch on hard foods — so much so that pet rabbits might chew on something you don't want them to, like the wood holding their pens together.
Rabbits aren't being destructive on purpose, though. Their teeth never stop growing, and the rabbits have to eat hard stuff so their teeth don't grow out of control.
It all goes back to their wild ancestors. Rabbits are herbivores — that means they only eat plants and veggies. They have front teeth, called incisors, that they use to cut off grass and gnaw on bark. The back teeth, or cheek teeth, grind the food into tiny bits so it's easier to swallow and digest.
Right behind the incisors are a second set of teeth, called peg teeth, that the bottom teeth rub against. Rabbits have a big gap in their mouths along the sides. That's where the canine teeth are in meat-eating animals. (Canine teeth are the pointy pairs of teeth in dogs and cats — those teeth help them bite into their food.)
In the wild, rabbits wear down their teeth as they gnaw on their dinner of bark and plants and as they grind against each other. But pet rabbits are often served soft foods that they don't have to chew very much. If this happens too much, the teeth don't wear down enough.
So, feed a rabbit a carrot — and help keep its teeth in shape!

Turn Off TV, Turn On Family Fun

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Children in the United States view an average of 3-5 hours of television daily. While television can be a positive, creative force in helping children and adults gain new and different information, too often it is overused and prevents family members from enjoying fun and enriching activities together.

When could be a better time to turn off the television and to enjoy quality family time together than during "National TV Turn-Off Week," April 24-30. Here are some suggestions for activities your family can do together instead of watching television:

* Play charades
* Listen to music
* Write letters
* Invite friends over
* Host a family Talent Show Night
* Enjoy jigsaw puzzles
* Have a "Clean-the-Attic" party
* Play board games
* Read books together
* Make a photo collage
* Make a scrapbook
* Visit the humane league
* Plan a summer vacation
* Share family history
* Attend a local sporting event
* Start a collection
* Go out for ice cream

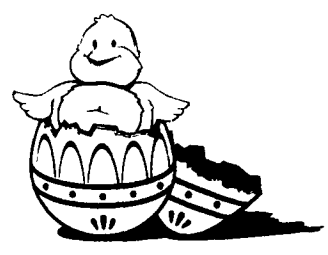
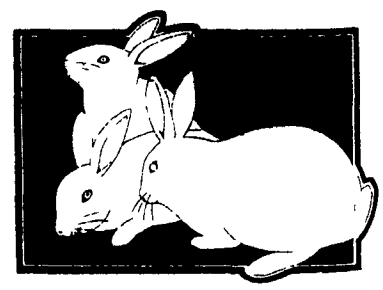
* Enjoy an indoor picnic





Feedsack Club To Hold Convention April 4-5

PITTSBURGH (Allegheny Co.) — The Feedsack Club, with a membership of 700, will be holding its 3rd annual convention on April 4 and 5, at Ho Jo's, 2100 Lincoln Highway, Route 30, Lancaster. The Feedsack Club members buy, sell, trade, collect and exhibit feedsacks. They use feedsacks for quilts, vests, baby quilts, doll quilts, miniatures, clothes, and decorating ideas.

Concurrent with Quilters' Heritage Celebration, admission to the Feedsack Convention is free. There will be feedsack quilts, fashions, household items and other memorabilia from the 1920s and 1930s on display. There will also be demonstrations, vendors, door prizes, and members trading feedsacks.

On Saturday, April 5, there will be two classes offered for pre-registered members: 1. Feedsack Club Friendship Quilt Class, hosted by Connie Tilman; and 2. Feedsack Doll Class, hosted by Frannie Meshorer.

The Club offers a new service this year for quilters who have a tool, product, quilt-related item that they would like demonstrated, highlighted, and/or promoted. Quilters have sent us their products because they can't be there and we will do the above demos for them.

The Feedsack Club is an informational group holding exhibits at Pioneer Days in Dade City, Fla.; Decatur House in Washington, D.C.; and Mancuso Williamsburg, Va. Show. There will be a large exhibit May 10-September 1 in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia.

Yearly membership dues in the Feedsack Club are $12 which includes a membership list indicating those who wish to buy, trade, sell, plus a bi-monthly newsletter containing historical information, convention news, quilting tips, patterns, instruction, and regional retreat dates.

To join the club, send a check to Jane Clark Stapel, 25 S. Starr Avenue, #16 Pittsburgh, PA 15202. Jane is the founder of the Club and may be reached at (412) 766-3996.

Hundreds congregate at the annual Feedsack Convention to swap, sell, buy or simply to admire the thousands of feedsack patterns collected.

Learn Garnishing Tips From Professional Chef

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — An ordinary meal takes on a touch of class when garnished with a carrot tulip or a scallion tassel.

All it takes to turn a simple tomato into a tomato rose or a cucumber into a fan is a sharp paring knife and a little know how.

Garnishing basics are the forte of Stuart Anstead, who teaches classes at the KITCHENworks located in Park City, Lancaster.

At a recent class, Anstead, who is chef and graduate of London Institute in England, demonstrated how quickly and easily vegetables can add the finishing touches to a buffet or a simple dish.

During his training, Anstead reported that he prepared as many as 2,000 scallion tassels for one occassion. While the class struggled a bit with their first efforts in following Anstead's instructions, it was clear that with practice, one could become as adept as Anstead.

The neat thing about garnishing is that the garnishes can be prepared several days ahead of time if kept in ice water. In fact, many of the garnishes need to set in ice water for several hours before opening properly.

It is much easier to learn garnishing by following the techniques demonstrated rather than by attempting it by reading instructions. However, here are a few garnishing techniques that Anstead taught, which will be described below.

An advance garnishing class is being offered at the KITCHEN works on Saturday, April 12, at 2 p.m. The class will last about 1½ hours and cost $10. Students should bring a paring knife and a channel cutter or a stripper, but all vegetables and fruits will be provided to create tomato starbursts, citrus baskets, cucumber spirals, apple swans, and other garnishes.

Also a class on the use and care of cutlery will teach proper chopping and dicing techniques. In addition, participants will learn how to sharpen and store knives to keep them in top condition.

Class size is limited. Registration for these classes must be made in advance. For more information or questions about upcoming classes, call the KITCHENworks at (717) 290-8282.

Use crisp, fresh vegetables for best results.

Scallion tassels: Slice off top just below where white stops growing. Shred oblong to about ¼ -inch from one edge. Put in ice water for tassels to spread.

Tomato Rosette: Peel tomato similar to an orange by starting at one edge and keeping peel in one piece to the end. Make sure only the skin and no flesh is removed. Take the skin and roll up like a rose. Set in cucumber crown and garnish with thin onion greens.

Tomato Rose: Slice tomato into six wedges but do not separate the sections at the bottom. Carefully peel back skin of each section with the point of the paring knife. The section peels will lay out and form petals around the tomato.

Radish Florets: Peel outside petals to look like tulip.

Cucumber crown: Slice in two-inch sections. Cut one edge in v-shapes and slip apart. Put radish flower inside or fill with vegetable dip.

Chinese Wedding Rings: Cut carrots in 2-inch pieces. Square off edges. Slice into three oblong pieces. Cut each one into an N shape, without slicing through both ends. Twist. Place on a piece of meat with a sprig of parsley.

Women In Agriculture Conference Focuses On Balance As Wife, Mom, Dairy Partner

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Farm women from Pennsylvania and surrounding states gathered for a day of learning and fellowship recently. The Women in Agriculture spring conference, sponsored by Protiva, drew approximately 100 to the Holiday Inn at Chambersburg. The meeting was geared toward women in the dairy business, and featured talks by industry personnel and a series of workshops.

Dr. Lisa Holden, assistant professor of dairy and animal sciences at Penn state, set the tone for the meeting with a lively talk on time management, "The Balance as Wife, Mom, and Dairy Partner." She discussed time-saving tactics including making schedules, using lists, and combining multiple tasks. She talked about priorities, asking the women what legacy they would want to leave.

"It's a pretty good bet you're going to milk tomorrow. It's a pretty good bet you're going to cook dinner. But are these the priorities?" she asked the group.

She made her point in a demonstration using a pint jar, some ping-pong balls, and pennies. The jar was a day in your life, the ping-pong balls were the priorities, and the pennies the everyday tasks. She had a volunteer start filling the jar with the pennies. Soon there was no room for the ping-pong balls. But when the ping-pong balls went in first, the pennies could easily slide in around the balls, and everything fit.

Patsy Perkins, owner of Idealink, an Atlanta, Georgia training firm, was the keynote speaker for the event. The organization helps agricultural producers realize their full potential through effective communication, leadership skills, and envisioning the future. Her talk was titled "Get Jazzed — The Four C's of Harmony."

"God gave us all 100 percent potential. In studies, they say we use about 5 percent of that potential. So what happens to that other 95 percent? Why don't we use it?" she challenged the group. "Maybe it's that we think what we want is unrealistic, that it can never happen. We don't see ourselves accomplishing these things. And basically what happens is that we build a wall," she suggested. The talk focused on ways to tear that imaginary wall down, allowing women to fulfill their potential.

The first way is through effective communication, Ms. Perkins said. Effective communication is a two-way street, said the energetic speaker. There is no such thing as a lack of communication, ". . . just ineffective appreciation of it. Effective communicatioin is the most important factor in business and management today. We all know that communication is also the most important factor in all our personal relationships too."

Barriers to communication she highlighted included failing to appraise the receiver's background and perceptions, failing to define the message, and failing to acknowledge that the receiver of the message might not share your point of view.

"Why not go into a school and give a talk on farming for Earth Day?" she suggested, "There are a lot of people here today who know a whole lot about the earth, a whole lot more than someone from the Sierra Club. Why not share that information?"

Dr. Lisa Holden talked to the group about "The Balanced as Wife, Mom, and Dairy Partner."

Mary Ann Keith, agricultural administrator for Mid-State Bank and Trust Co. shared her expertise.

Dorothea Fitzsimmons, D.V.M. talked on the ABCs of calf TLC.

Patsy Perkins, owner of Idealink, was the keynote speaker.

Confidence is a second way we can realize our full potential according to Ms. Perkins. In order to have people take you seriously, she said, you need to project a sense of self confidence, "Your self image is a compilation of the opinions you have about yourself. Those opinions control the real use of your potential." She advocated finding a balance between being passive and aggressive. A friendly facial expression, firm and to the point voice, relaxed hands, and appropriate posture all combine to present an assertive persona.

Consideration was third on Ms. Perkins' list of ways to achieve harmony. "Never miss the opportunity to say something encouraging to or about someone" was one of her catch phrases on this topic. She stressed the importance of treating people the way you would want to be treated, especially those people who you might disagree with.

The fourth "C" she discussed was collaboration. She suggested networking, within and outside of agriculture, as a valuable resource for the dairy women. Find the common ground you share with others, gain an understanding of who they are, and insure that they understand who you are.

Mary Ann Keith, agricultural administrator with Mid-State Band and Trust Company, talked about the emotional side of economic decisions. She said more often than not women are the ones on the farm responsible for balancing the books. Since men and women have different styles of communication, when it's time to make a major financial decision there is often miscommunication. She suggested the best way to work through the communication process is to hold regularly scheduled meetings to discuss the farming operation. This gives all the people involved practice discussing things, so when a major decision needs to be made, the people are comfortable with the communication process.

Dorothea Fitzsimmons, D.V.M., from Protiva, presented an update on Posilac and explained the biology of BST. A post-approval monitoring program designed to pick up problems with BST and make sure it is safe has been developed by Protiva in conjunctioin with FDA. The program includes a controlled study of 28 commercial dairy herds. "No new issues have been raised as a result of this program," said the veterinarian. A producer panel moderated by Dr. Fitzsimmons addressed issues that had arisen during the use of Posilac on the farm.

Dorothea Fitzsimmons, D.V.M., on the left, moderated a panel discussion on BST. Panel members included, from left: Shirley Krall from Lebanon County, Julie Yarrington from Harford County, Md., and Patti Hege from Franklin County.

Afternoon workshops included Quick, Nutritious Meals on a Budget sponsored by the PA Beef Council, ABC's of Calf TLC by Dr. Fitzsimmons, and Anticipating Spring by Melanie Hunsecker, landscape designer for Phillips Seed and Garden Center and partner with her husband in a dairy farm.

Farm Women Societies

Lebanon Society 21

Members of Lebanon Farm Women Society 21 treated their sweethearts to a banquet at the Old Country Buffet in Feb. Gerie Heagy made beautiful potpourri heart favors for each member.

The March meeting centered around safety and was hosted by Ruth and Carolyn Hostetter. Steve Ulrich from Mellon Bank gave a presentation on Personal Banking Safety. His information was interesting and helpful in protection against fraud and counterfeiting.

Ruth and Carolyn arranged a make-your-own hoggie bar with lime Jell-O and chocolate cake for refreshments.

The business meeting consisted of county news and upcoming events with president Millie Sonnoyen presiding. She suggested that the group see a musical together.

Lancaster Society 18

Lancaster County Society 18 of Farm Women met in March for a pot luck meal at Ella Mae Hershey's home. More than 21 members and guests responded to the roll call by revealing things that irritate them.

Guest speaker Greg Scott, member of the architectual firm that designed Pennsylvania's Hospice, shared how every detail was planned to provide a home-like place for the "End of Life Experience." Scott said that the firm's conviction is that the afternoon of human life should be as meaningful as its the beginning. The Hospice was designed to have wide windows in order to see the sun shine, flower beds, fountains, and water gardens. More than 500 volunteers, from nurses to chaplains, minister to the patients, who range from a few hours of age to 101 years.

Husbands and guests are invited to share in the upcomimg luncheon at Country Table Restaurant. Lettie Nissley planned a trip to Ellis Island in New York for members on May 20.

Lancaster 8

LANDSCAPING FOR HUMMINGBIRDS AND BUTTERFLIES

Learn how to choose plants that enhance the natural environment. The first annual gardener's lecture series called the GardenWise Conference will feature annual flowers, native plant choices and design; selective pruning and pest-free plants on Saturday, April 12, at Penn State York Campus, York, from 8;30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Cost for the GardenWise conference is $35. Call Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 840-7408.

Are you looking for easy-care and unusual annuals that attract butterflies and birds? Marilyn Daly, garden writer, researcher and teacher at Longwood Gardens will present ways to attract butterflies and birds using unusual annual and biennial flowers.

One of the best known is butterfly weed. Butterfly weed, a biennial, grows as a wildflower and attracts both hummingbirds and butterflies. Butterfly weed produces a 3-foot high flower spike of brilliant orange flower clusters. Butterfly weed blooms in mid to late summer and prefers dry or moist soils.

Pennsylvania has only one hummingbird species to enjoy, the ruby-throated hummingbird. They are named for their crimson, iridescent throat feathers. Hummingbirds are particularly well adapted for sipping nectar from flowers: They have long, tubular or brush-tipped tongues and can fly forward, backward, to the left and right, hover, and propel themselves upside down. Ruby-throated hummingbirds supplement a diet of flower nectar with insects, spiders, and t ree sap from woodpecker drilling.

Ruby-throated hummingbirds are found in deciduous woodlands as well as urban backyards often near water. Their nests are exquisite; comprised of bud scales and lichens, bound with spider's silk. Hummingbirds can be lured to your yard with a hummingbird feeder that dispense sugar water from red plastic "flowers." Feeders should be filled with a boiled solution of 4 parts of water to 1 part white sugar. It is unnecessary to add red dye to the sugar water.

Hummers can also be attracted to a garden planted with nectar-producing red, orange, or pink tubular-shaped blossoms such as cardinal flower(Lobelia cardinalis).

Butterflies feed from many of the same flowers as hummingbirds, but find milkweeds (asclepias spp.) and dogbanes (apocynum spp.) particularly attractive. Butterflies that visit Pennsylvania gardens include the tiger swallowtail, monarch, black swallowtail, and viceroy. An attractive moth that is active by day is the hummingbird moth so named because of its hummingbird-like flight.

To landscape your yard for hummingbirds and butterflies, plant flowers in large clumps to make conspicuous displays. Select a variety of plants so that flowering is continuous from May through August. A good garden design is one with layered vegetation; large shrubs in back with flowers in front, and a fence or arbor planted with flowering vines.

Ida's Notebook

by Ida Risser

Long April 1st was the date on which people settled their debts. They also went to the courthouse to record deeds and take care of business in Lancaster. My mother often talked about the scarcity of paper to write on and she tore unused pages out of old record books to use for a diary. Even in her old age, she cut out scraps of white paper from newspaeprs to use for lists.

There is an expression that goes something like this, "I'll write that in the chimney." This I never understood until one day I saw German words and some numbers written on the white plaster in the attic around our 1813 farmhouse chimney.

We lived in my Weidler ancestors' brick house for many years. And, I'm told that they were big money lenders. Maybe some of their records were actually written "in the chimney." Was this done for lack of paper or just for privacy?

Another memory of April 1st is the tricks that we played on fellow workers in an office. When we answered the telephone on April 1st, sometimes we gave the wrong information. We had the insurance agents phone a beauty parlor or even the Lancaster County jail. Of course, no one from there had called them and so we had a laugh at their expense.

One day a silver spoon from a restaurant was found in a man's jacket pocket after he returned to his office. Then he was accused of taking it even though he knew nothing about it. Today we limit ourselves to the old saying, "Your shoe is untied" so that we can say "April Fool" when they look at them.

LIVING ON A REDUCED INCOME — SETTING SPENDING PRIORITIES

Have your work hours been reduced? Have you suffered a recent illness that kept you from work? Will you be retiring soon?

Faced with a reduced income, you'll need to cut back on spending and develop a spending plan to help you pay your bills. If your income will be reduced for more than a month, adjust your spending habits to maintain control of your finances.

Many people try to hide financial problems from themselves or family members. Not facing your problems can be very destructive because they worry and stress caused by financial uncertainty and lack of cash may be worse than the financial problem itself. It's important to look realistically at your situation and actively seek solutions to your problems, despite the discomfort.

Because spending decisions affect the whole family, talk with your family about your situation. Let them know you need to change your spending. Involve them in deciding spending priorities. If family members understand the tough choices that must be made and have a voice in making the decisions, they will be more willing to accept the decisions.

As your family talks about what is most important, be sure to listen to what others say. Supporting each other can help you pull together as a family and get through these hard times.

How Other Families Handle Reduced Income

Studies show families respond to reduced income by cutting back on their spending. Spending for nonessentials such as luxuries, vacations, eating out, and home furnishings are eliminated or reduced first. As the period of unemployment or reduced income continues, many families also report reduced spending for basic needs including food, shelter, transporation, and medical care.

Families also say the revise their budgets. Most make a new spending plan that includes a revised plan for getting the bills paid.

Fewer families report increasing their income or using more credit as ways to manage during unemployment. Borrowing or using credit to pay bills often brings only temporary relief. For those families who did increase their use of credit, the more they borrowed, the more unhappy they were with their financial situation.

The studies also found that families who quickly made changes in their spending habits were the most satisfied with how they were managing during unemployment. Families who didn't make changes felt more out of control and more dissatisifed.

Making A Spending Plan

A spending plan is always an effective tool to help you get the most for your money. It is even more important when you have a sudden change in your income. A spending plan helps you:

- Make decisions about how to spend your money.
- Provide for needs before wants.
- Match your spending to your current income.
- Prevent family arguments over money.

By comparing your income and planned expenses before and after your income was reduced, you can see what changes are needed.

Making Your Spending Plan Work

Once your have a spending plan that sets spending amounts for essential family needs and balances your spending with your income, you'll have to stick to it. Writing it down is not enough. You must use the plan to guide your spending.

Living on a reduced income may be temporary or prolonged. Getting the most from your income during this time requires careful planning and wise spending decisions.

A spending plan based on what you and your family consider to be most important can help you balance your spending with your available income and resources. Keeping track of your spending will help ensure that you have the money for the things your family needs most.

Learning By Doing: New Generation Cooperatives

DONALD C. FRETTS
Fayette County Extension

Generations of 4-H and FFA youth have learned valuable life skills by practicing "learning by doing." Through local 4-H clubs of FFA chapters, the "book" learning is supplemented by practical and applicable local project activities plus local, state, and national leadership opportunities that prepare young people to be more successful in life.

Modern-day agricultural producers in Pennsylvania and, perhaps more specifically, western Pennsylvania may benefit significantly by adopting this tried and true practice toward creating opportunities for the next generation of farm producers.

Many current farmers see no opportunity for the future, while others prosper. Why is this? Are we too "traditional" in our thinking? Is the only way to be successful in production agriculture contingent with expansion of every farm operation into a mega-farm? Can we change the attitude and profitability of farmers involved in production agriculture?

Maybe we can learn from farmers in other areas of the country. Back in the 1980s, the north central states, namely North Dakota and Minnesota, farmers of sugar beets, corn, soybeans and durum wheat found themselves in a distressing situation.

25 Years Of History

The recent history actually begins in the '70s, commonly called the "Decade of Delusion" by North Dakotans. Everything was rosy, grain prices were high, coal exports were great due to the OPEC energy crisis, new oil fields were developed in Western North Dakota, farm size grew and profits were up, per capita income was 122 percent of the national average. The future was bright and so rural leaders planned for the continued economic and population growth.

The '80s turned into the "Decade of Despair." Oil prices collapsed and so did the coal exports, grain and cattle prices dropped, 6,500 farms were lost, urban and rural residents began leaving the state resulting in a total North Dakota population decline of 18,000 persons or 3 percent, 16,000 from rural areas.

The problem was that an infrastructure including roads, utilities, etc., had been developed for population and industrial growth, but the opposite was happening. After waiting for rural development, promised by the government, the rural and economic community decided to attempt to solve their own problems. It was concluded that no one was coming to their rescue. There were three conclusions drawn:

1. North Dakotans must solve their own problems.
2. They must begin a rural development program.
3. Citizens and business groups must change legislative public policies that would help to stimulate economic development.

It is important to understand a bit of the size of the challenge by being aware that most of the rural communities are simply crossroads communities and some rural counties have populations of only 3-5 residents per square mile. It would be difficult to equal that number in most rural parts of Pennsylvania.

What Happened?

Dennis Hill, CEO, North Dakota Association of Rural Electric Cooperatives, stated, "We have always believed that persons who live in rural America deserve the same qualities of life as those who live in cities: good roads, schools, phone service, electricity, cable TV and water. It now became clear that economic security — a job — was also high on that list. And as we had fought for all those other essential services; it now had come time to fight for economic security as well."

Nine rural telephone cooperatives joined in the effort to turn rural North Dakota around. They started a Rural Development program and hired Bill Patrie, an economic development specialist, to run it. The results are in, since 1990, 52 new rural cooperatives have successfully started in North Dakota and Minnesota, the majority are "valued added" cooperatives, and there is an average of 10 new cooperatives per year forming in the two states.

What Is A New Generation Cooperative?

A new generation cooperative is simply one that guarantees the commitment of its owners, usually involves adding value to a farm produced commodity, and is vertically integrated from farm to retail market. As an example of commitment, if one of us would start an independent business and invest our own money, we would normally also make personal and possibly sacrificial commitment to protect our investment by building a successful enterprise. New generation cooperatives adopt the same principle.

1. Only sell as many shares of stock equal to the processing capacity as defined by the market.
2. Tie the equity investment of the stockholders to units of production, i.e. per bushel of corn, per steer, per hog, etc. The equity investment from producers needs to be a minimum of 40-50 percent of total investment capital needed. Much of that investment input may be borrowed money.
3. A "share" is based on the value of the raw commodity.
4. A grower contract with shareholders that is perpetual; quantity, quality, and forever.
5. Shares are tradable; price is dependent on traders and stock value increase or decline.
6. The capital is permanent, not revolving.

What Is The Formula?

The formula that has been successful in starting new cooperatives is logical and simple.

1. Identify a need or opportunity.
2. Do a feasibility study relative to projecting the success of the idea.
3. Create the business plan.
4. Capitalize the business.
5. Limit the membership.

What Are The Lessons Learned?

Bill Patrie has indicated the following lessons have been learned the hard way.

1. It is essential to have a significant commitment from the producers. Only the truly committed should be involved. As an example, producers must be compelled to deliver corn at 80 percent of market price, recognizing that the return must come from the retail product.
2. Don't count on government support to insure the success of the cooperative. Treat government support as a luxury not a requirement. The development of Ethanol is a prime example.
3. Make the producer/stockholder agreement tough but fair.
4. Don't look for an "enemy" as a reason to begin a new venture. Blaming something or someone else for a cause will not lead to a successful business venture.
5. Producers need to build a "real" sense of community that can survive truth and promote teamwork. In "community" there are no enemies.

What Are The Pitfalls?

1. Not all ideas are feasible. Approximately 50 percent of proposed cooperatives never come to fruition either from a feasibility study or stock purchase plan.
2. Conventional economic development thinking doesn't necessarily include sharing development dollars with rural development.
3. Severe ridicule and opposition comes forth from conventional business involved in the marketplace a new cooperative is trying to enter.

What Are The Potential Rewards?

The best way to illustrate the potential returns as a result of the wave of new generation cooperatives is to give some examples of success.

- Dakota Growers Pasta — Produces pasta from durum wheat and markets worldwide. Formed 1992 and doubled in size within three years, return on original investment more than 100 percent. Created 210 jobs.
- North American Bison — Raises, processes and sells bison meat retail worldwide. Created 25 jobs, profitable almost immediately and already expanded.
- Midwest Investors — 400 Corn and Soybean growers invested $8 million in a egg production and breaking processing facility that sells 900,000 dozen of liquid eggs per week.
- Golden Growers — Under construction for the manufacturing of fructose corn syrup. Will supply 4 percent of the domestic use of fructose. Creating 200 new jobs.
- Dakota Dairy — 45 members will manufacture cheese and create employment for 8 persons.
- American Crystal Sugar — Begun in 1978 when former independent processor quit. Currently supplies 17 percent of table sugar worldwide. Stock valued at 6 times its original value.
- Northern Plains Premium Beef — A 4-state, 2-country (U.S. & Canada) venture involving 2,841 ranchers producing beef from conception to the restaurant table in a worldwide market. Will create 800 jobs.
- South Dakota Soybean Processors — The first farmer owned soybean processing plant, 2,080 farmers raised $22 million of equity to construct a $32 million plant. Scheduled to be on line September '96. SDSP will process 16 million bushels of soybeans per year. South Dakota produces 80-90 million bushels per year.

What Can We Apply For Pennsylvania Producers?

Certainly the trend in the north central states is toward producer owned cooperatives. As you travel through the area, the economic importance of new and old generation cooperatives is apparent. Without cooperatives, farmers in those states would have significantly harder task competing in the marketplace of today.

Is Pennsylvania that much different? Dairy cooperatives, fruit and vegetable cooperatives, breeding cooperatives, supply cooperatives, dairy herd records cooperatives, and credit cooperatives have a rich history of both success and failure in Pennsylvania. Perhaps the diversity of Pennsylvania agriculture makes it more difficult to focus quite like North Dakota or Minnesota farmers, but is there room for additional opportunities and if so how do we identify them?

Recently new specialized cooperatives have been developed and promoted by PASA (Pa. Assoc. for Sustainable Agric.). In addition, hay marketing cooperatives and cooperative cull cow marketing has been explored.

Certainly the opportunity exists for the successful development of value added cooperatives in Pennsylvania. Our farmers can learn from others about their "learning by doing" experiences and develop value added cooperatives for the hungry population within 500 miles of Pennsylvania. Learning by doing is still the best time tested method to learn and practice life skills such as creating new business opportunities for the improvement of one's own life plus the community.

The residents of Renville, Minnesota can happily attest to the value of cooperatives as a community building influence. Eight years ago, residents were leaving and the community was rapidly declining. After the beginning of several new generation cooperatives, the economy is healthy once again and a brand new community center was dedicated in 1995. Can this also be the future of some Pennsylvania communities?

Brosius Asks Commodity Groups To Promote "Pennsylvania Pride"

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius called upon Pennsylvania's commodity groups to support the "Pennsylvania Pride" marketing program for a stronger, more cohesive promotion of the state's agriculture products.

"Gov. Tom Ridge is committed to promoting Pennsylvania and its world-class products around the globe, and we must be as innovative as possible in responding to the needs of the changing global markets," said Brosius. He offered welcoming remarks at a marketing forum sponsored jointly by the department and the Pennsylvania Commodity Roundtable.

"Pennsylvania's farm and food products have set a quality standard that is recognized around the world. By combining promotional efforts, statewide commodity groups can have greater impact in the marketplace."

New Jersey Secretary of Agriculture Arthur R. Brown, Jr., the Forum's keynote speaker, discuessed his state's highly successful "Jersey Fresh" promotion program. The program, now in its 14th year, has become recognized as a symbol of consistently high quality.

"The program is a source of pride to all of agriculture in New Jersey," Brown said. "A strong agriculture makes for a strong New Jersey, and the program promotes the message that New Jersey is a good place to live and raise families and a good place to bring businesses."

According to Brown, the program has a $1.2 million budget targeted for billboards, television commercial, print advertising and point of purchase programs. Extensive polling helps determine where advertising money will be most effective to reinforce the Jersey Fresh concept.

Dr. John Lord, food marketing department chairman at St. Joseph's University, discussed changing consumers trends in the food industry. Gordon Montgomery, vice president, client services of Leo Burnett USA, discussed studies done by the dairy industry to identify marketing strategies for increasing consumption of dairy products.

Staff from the Pennsylvania Agriculture Department's Bureau of Market Development discussed marketing and promotion activities by the department. Participants explored opportunities for joint promotions under the "Pennsylvania Pride" label.

Attention At Calving Time Boosts Profits

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The most important link in the beef production chain is the beef cow and her live, healthy calf. Calving time is critical to your economic well-being throughout the year. Making sure the cow is in good condition improves your bottom line.

Although the calving period is critical for cows, and especially first-calf heifers, it is a time when you begin to see the benefits of a successful breeding program. It is beneficial for the cows and heifers to be sure the calving period is as stress-free as possible.

Dr. John Hough, director of research and performance for the American Hereford Association, said one of the first steps for a successful calving program for all cattle producers is to avoid all types of unnecessary stress on cows. Keeping cows in familiar surroundings and following nutrition recommendations also help ensure successful calving.

During the last 30-45 days of pregnancy, cows generally need a 10-15 percent increase in the ration if being fed a stored roughage. This can be an extra two pounds of hay or equivalent, so that an additional pound of total digestible nutrients (TDN) is provided. You can improve ration quality at the same time by slightly increasing protein level. This includes using protein blocks, supplements, range cubes or grazing small grain pasture for four to five hours every four to five days.

If possible, select a calving site that is easy for you to observe cows and heifers. A small, clean, sodded pasture works well and permits cows to calve under natural conditions, thus reducing stress.

Hough recommends checking cows every three to four hours. First-calf heifers and cows you suspect of having problems may need additional checking. The cow will normally calve in a one to three-hour period. If calving is normal, leave her alone. If you think there could be any problam, call your veterinarian.

Regionalization Plan To Serve Poultry Growers

COLLEGE PARK, Md.— A signing ceremony on March 19 marked the first step in a planned interagency, tristate poultry initiative to provide a unified, cost-effective approach to better poultry health services in the important Delmarva broiler-growing area.

Signators to the March 19 Cooperative Agreement were Lewis R. Riley, Maryland Secretary of Agriculture (MDA); Thomas A. Fretz, dean of the college of Agriculture and Natural Resources, University of Maryland at College Park (AGNR); and William D. Hueston, associate dean, College Park campus, Virginia-Maryland Regional College of Veterinary Medicine (VETMED).

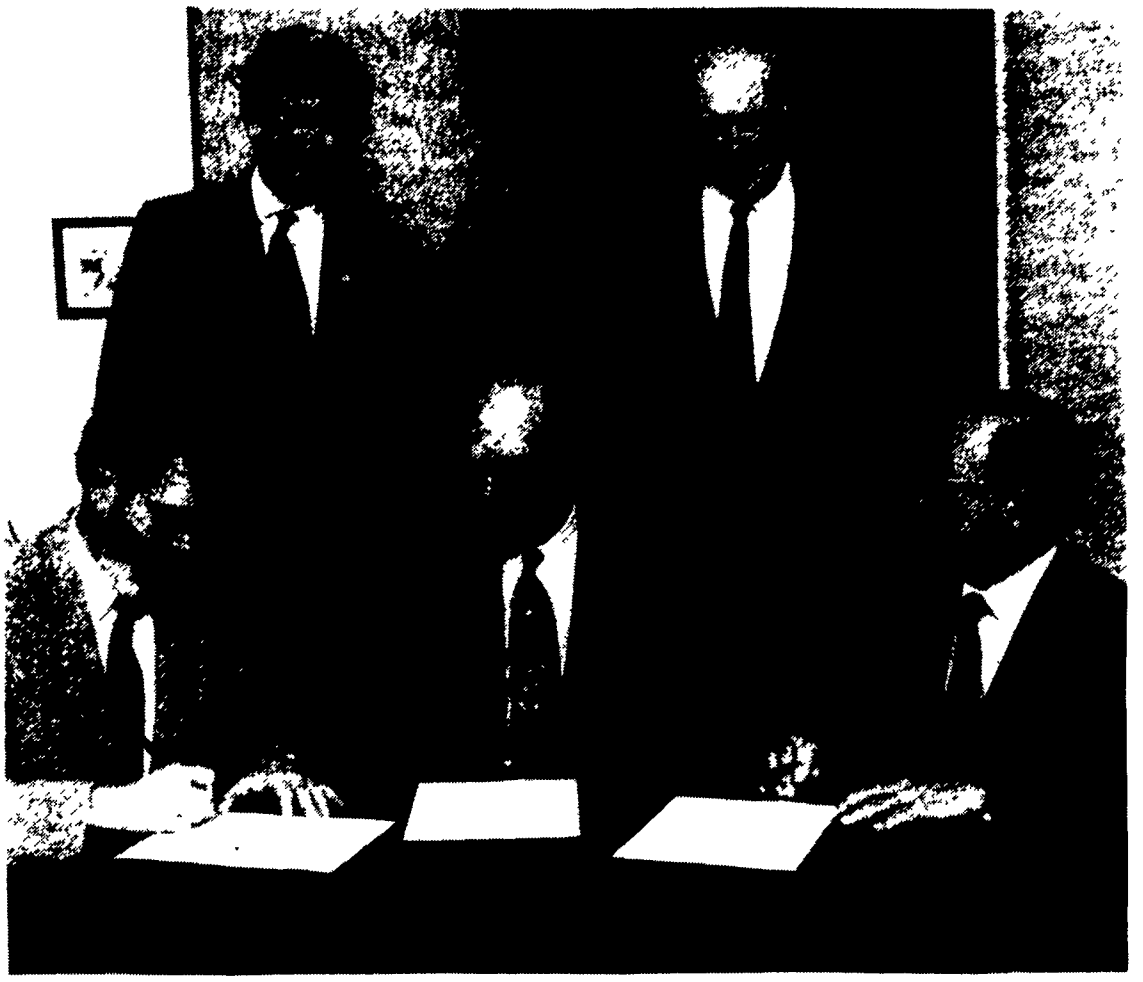
The agreement formalizes a research associate position to coordinate establishment and functioning of a region poultry diagnostic laboratory system. This position involves a person stationed at VETMED as a University of Maryland employee, but being paid partly by MDA (100 percent by MDA until June 30 and 50 percent thereafter).

Archibald B. Park, former MDA assistant secretary for Food Safety and Consumer Services, has assumed the research associate position described in the MDA-VETMED Cooperative Agreement. Park had been an MDA official since 1984, having previously served as state veterinarian. He has spent the last 10 years as an assistant MDA secretary.

In his new position, Park's duties and responsibilities will include identifying potential resources, writing grant proposals, encouraging collaboration among the three state poultry diagnostic laboratories in Delaware, Maryland and Virginia; and providing technical assistance in support of population medicine services to the poultry industry.

A native of Canada, Park holds a bachelor's degree from Ontario Veterinary College at the University of Guelph and a DVM from the University of Toronto. Prior to joining MDA, he was a private consultant for several years.

Earlier professional experience included working for the Veterinary Services division of the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS). He also worked for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and the USDA's Agricultural Research Service. And he spent six years with General Electric. He had considerable experience as an administrator in an interagency basic research program involving remote sensing of plants and soils.



William D. Hueston, left, associate dean for the Virginia-Maryland Regional College of Veterinary Medicine, signs the official document while other signators wait their turn during March 19 signing ceremony on the University of Maryland campus at College Park. The other signators are Thomas A. Fretz, center, dean of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources at UMCP, and Lewis R. Riley, right, Maryland Secretary of Agriculture. Looking on are Henry A. Virts, left, MDA deputy secretary, and Archibald B. Park, former MDA assistant secretary, who assumed the research associate position established by the MDA-VETMED Cooperative Agreement.

Tractor Companies Unite To Promote ROPS, Seat Belts On Older Machines

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — In an unprecedented joint effort, North America's five leading tractor companies are working together to encourage tractor owners to have their older machines equipped with rollover protective structures (ROPS) and seat belts in an effort to help reduce deaths and injuries associated with rollovers and runovers.

As an incentive to owners, AGCO Corporation, Case Corporation, Deere & Company, Kubota Tractor Corporation, and New Holland North America, Inc. are making it possible to purchase ROPS and seat belts at the companies' cost.

This joint effort is aimed at reducing the two leading causes of death and injury to tractor operators. Statistics compiled by the National Safety Council show 55 percent of all tractor-related deaths in 1995 were associated with rollovers and 26 percent involved people who were run over by tractors. Approximately one-half of the people run over were operators who were thrown from tractors.

A recent study of 76 tractor rollover fatalities by Iowa State University and the University of Iowa Center for Agricultural Safety and Health (I-CASH) showed all 76 victims were operating tractors without ROPS and seat belts.

"If a tractor rolls over and it doesn't have an ROPS, there's a 75 percent chance of dying," said I-CASH Director Dr. Kelley Donham. "If you put an ROPS and seat belt on the tractor, and wear the seat belt, you have a 95 percent or greater chance of walking away from the situation."

ROPS and seat belts were adopted as standard equipment by all major tractor manufacturers in 1985. However, according to a 1993 survey by the USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service, more than 2.9 million, or 62 percent, of the estimated 4.7 million tractors in use on farms were not equipped with ROPS and seat belts.

To encourage owners to have ROPS and seat belts installed on their older tractors and to reduce the effect that price may have on the decision, AGCO, Case, John Deere, Kubota, and New Holland are offering kits at cost to their dealers and asking them to sell these kits without markup. For tractor owners concerned about low overhead clearance, such as barn doors, folding ROPS kits are also available for some tractors. Depending on the tractor model, most ROPS kits cost less than $600 (U.S.), plus freight and installation. Kits are available for most tractors manufacturered in the mid/late 1960s up to 1985 (when ROPS and seat belts became standard).

In addition to the price incentive, the companies plan to place cosponsored announcements in various farm media, including company-produced communications, to promote ROPS and seat belts on older tractors. At the same time, each company will continue its individual educational and promotional programs to encourage owners to have their older tractors equipped with ROPS and seat belts.

Tractor owners should contact their local dealer for more information and to set up an appointment to have ROPS and seat belts installed on their older tractors.

Study Shows Long-Term Exposure To Pesticides Not Detrimental

CLAYTON, N.J. — The results of a study on the long-term exposure of farmers to pesticides was presented by Dr. Nancy Feidler, associate professor of environmental and community medicine at Rutgers, at the South Jersey Fruit Meeting and Labor Conference recently.

Feidler's study with three other researchers at the Robert Wood Johnson Medical School focused on the neurological aspects of long-term exposure to organ phosphates used by fruit growers.

With the help of Jerry Frecon, agricultural agent with Rutgers Cooperative Extension, 57 fruit growers were selected for the study with an average age of 48 years and 23 years of exposure through pesticide spraying and mixing. The health of these farmers was compared to a group of cranberry and blueberry farmers plus hardware store owners who had low pesticide exposure but did similar physical work.

All growers were subjected to a battery of medical and neurological tests in addition to a series of questions on their health history. The growers with high exposure were in excellent health, and had no significant neurological or physical limitations in comparison to the control group with low pesticide exposure. Feidler's study, soon to be published, is the first that has studied long-term exposure where the subjects have been handling pesticides on a daily basis without any acute symptoms.

Dr. Mark Robson, executive director of the Institute for Occupational and Environmental Health at Rutgers, also presented a case study of a farm family that had been experiencing symptoms of poor health believed to be from acute pesticie exposure. The farmers were examined and found to be in good health, and through the implementation of sound health and safety practices recommended by Rutgers on their farm they no longer experienced poor health.

Approximately 140 fruit farmers, many who had participated in the study, attended the meeting in Glassboro. Specialists from Rutgers Cooperative Extension also presented the latest technology on integrated pest management in tree fruit crops. The meeting and conference were sponsored by Rutgers Cooperative Extension in cooperation with the New Jersey Horticultural Society.

Forest Video Released

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Conservationists concerned about the Chesapeake Bay watershed and its restoration now have a new tool to help spread the word about an important conservation technique.

"Riparian Forest Buffers: The Link Between Land and Water" is a 21-minute videotape produced by the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service to inform the public about the benefits of riparian forest buffers.

"The video is specifically designed to help landowners understand riparian forest buffers and their functions and values in agricultural, urban, and forested settings," said extension regional natural resources specialist Bob Tjaden, who directed production of the video. "It describes the buffers, explains how landowners can create one for themselves, and suggests contacts for additional help and information."

As detailed in the video, riparian forest buffers are areas of trees, shrubs, and herbaceous vegetation located adjacent to and up slope from a lake, stream, or other body of water. They maintain stream system integrity, protect water quality, and improve the habitat of plants and animals on land and in the water by absorbing excess nutrients; providing shade and organic matter; moderating stream temperature; supporting the food web; and controlling sediment, erosion, and stream bank stability.

Copies of the video are available in Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Virginia at local Extension, forestry, Natural Resources Conservation Service, and wildlife offices. Interested individuals can order their own copy for $15 by contacting the Wye Research and Education Center at (410) 827-8056.

Calving Time

The period immediately after delivery is especially important. If delivery has been normal, there will be few problems. The calf should stand and nurse within 30-45 minutes. It is extremely important that the calf get the colostrum or first milk from the cow. Consider dipping the umbilical or navel cord of the calf in a disinfectant solution to help prevent infection.

"In order to rebreed on schedule, the cow must recover from calving stress, repair the reproductive tract, furnish milk for her calf and start cycling. She can economically meet these requirements as long as she receives good nutrition and medical care," Hough said.

The Rainy Season Never Ends

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — For the past decade, ever so quietly and carefully, the University Park campus has used treated wastewater generated by thousands of students and employees to foster its very own rain forest. That may sound like a hard thing to hide, yet very few people who see the forest recognize it for what it is.

While touring the Deer Pens or State Game Land No. 176 off Fox Hill Road, between the campus and the airport, anyone noticing the sprayers of the Penn State Land Treatment System is seeing parts of the forest, as well as other land included in the project. Twenty-four hours a day, yearround, different portions of the sysetm whoosh treated wastewater onto acres of trees, undergrowth and cropland. None of this wastewater gets discharged directly into Spring Creek.

The process recycles nearly 1 billion gallons of water each year into the regional groundwater system, which is then reused, in part, to fill the four water towers on campus. Besides recycling the water, the process adds naturally occurring nutrients in the wastewater to the soil for pick-up by the crops and forest growth.

"Continuous use of the system since 1983 has resulted in the local groundwater levels remaining relative stable even in the worst drought conditions of the recent past," said Richard Parizek, a professor of geology who was among the earliest participants in the project and is still a member of its oversight group, the Wastewater Distribution Committee.

"By spraying no more than two inches per acre per week, the total area covered by the system receives about 100 inches per year over and above the natural rainfall — or 30 inches more than needed to qualify as a rain forest."

Owing to its uniqueness, the Land Treatment System over time became a living laboratory for many Penn State wildlife and ecosystem classes. Researchers focus on its effects on the local flora and fauna, and ongoing sampling of water quality is performed at 23 groundwater monitoring wells.

All this activity is coordinated by the 14-member Wastewater Distribution Committee, which includes University academicians and administrators and representatives of the State Game Commission — which owns some of the land.

"Besides being a pleasant place to hike, bike and hunt, the lands form a very complex biological system that needs to be managed closely, and that's the message the committee is trying hard to get across as we tour groups through it," said committee chairman John Gaudlip, a utility systems engineer with the Universitiy's Office of Physical Plant. "Last year, we gave tours for the state Department of Environmental Protection, Patton Township Supervisors, Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Centre Region Planning Commission and environmental attorneys from across the state."

During the popular tours, participants learn that hard data drives every bit of fine-tuning made to the system and that challenges abound in finding ways to effectively manage the system in an environmentally sound manner. Despite obstacles, the system is highly sensitive to the diverse interests of the University's physical plant and farm operations, various regulatory bodies, adjacent landowners and the Game Commission.

"There are some major hurdles to overcome," said Les Lanyon, associate professor of soil fertility and a committee member. "For instance, the normal growing season is out of sync with the periods of increased student activity. (Students) determine the pattern of flow in the system, One method to deal with the imbalance involves double cropping of corn in the summer and winter rye later to keep crop acreage in production as much of the year as possible."

Among the best forage species for removing nutrients from the soil is Reed Canarygrass, which can be fed to University livestock, according to Harold Harpster, associate professor of animal science and committee members.

Another important factor in wastewater usage is the influence of age and structure of forest vegetation on nutrient uptake.

"Studies are under way to determine if fast-growing young vegetation in recently cut forests take up nutrients faster compared to older vegetation," said Gerald Storm, assistant professor of wildlife science.

"Preliminary data from water samples taken at one meter below the surface indicated that nitrate-nitrogen concentrations in areas with young vegetation were significantly lower than in natural forests."

Such results suggest that with the availability of young growth forests and/or croplands, the practices undertaken by Penn State could someday play a role in helping others considering or using a land treatment system.

EARTH METAL®– A WORLD OF DIFFERENCE

Case International Earth Metal disk blades do make a world of difference on a tandem disk harrow.

An innovative, patented process reduces the sulfides in steel that create fracture points in conventional blades. Remaining sulfides are left in random, non-directional globules. You don't have to be a chemist to understand what this means. Longer wear - up to 20% longer. And, 60% greater shock resistance.

And, our unique shallow concavity, crimped-center blades, cut drawbar pull by 33% (compared to conical blades) and by more than 50% compared to spherical blades. That's fuel savings on top of longer wear and greater shock resistance.

Finally, a practical way to apply organic mulch to row crops

Organic mulch is the natural way to suppress weeds, help retain soil moisture, and improve soil conditions. Trouble is, hand mulching takes too much time and effort. Now the Millcreek Row Mulcher makes it easy to mulch berries, grapes, fruit trees, and other row crops. One operator can mulch an acre in just a couple hours depending on conditions.

Spread A Variety of Materials, Including Lime

You can spread all types of stemless flowable mulches, such as wood chips, sawdust, chopped bark, even compost, with plenty of clearance to avoid plant damage. Plus, the Millcreek Row Mulcher is ideal for banding lime and other materials requiring lighter applications. The optional metering gate gives you complete control of the coverage so you can tailor applications to best suit your cultivation practices.

For Commercial Growers
Choose from 3.1, 4.5, and 6.8 cubic yard capacities. Or call to discuss your special requirements.

For Small Growers

PULVERIZERS 19' to 46' wide

Now Brillion offers Pulverizers up to 46' wide to match your larger size tillage tools. Lighter weight, 20" ductile iron* roller wheels make it possible to widen the machine without drastically increasing the weight...and that means more firmed, clod-free seedbed acres per hour.

MORE CONTROL

DESIGNED FOR TOTAL PERFORMANCE

The superior design and greater flexibility of the New Holland Model 900 put you in control. This forage harvester is designed to meet the needs of big-crop producers. You get capacity, reliability and efficiency.

- The massive 21-inch cutterhead uses hardened alloy knives with tungsten edges for a uniform chop
- Under-knife baffles reduce crop carry-over and increase chopping capacity
- Exclusive flip-up feedrolls let you inspect the shearbar and smooth roll scraper
- The electric clutch provides immediate response and positive control of reversing gearbox
- Optional Metalert® III protects equipment and livestock

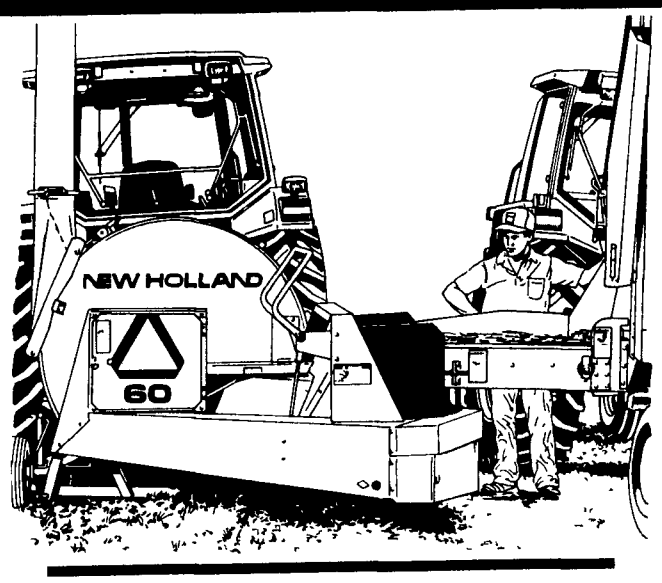
Get in control, with a New Holland Model 900 forage harvester

NEW HOLLAND

THE MODEL 60



IT FILLS TALL ORDERS

When you need a big capacity forage blower, you want the Model 60 from New Holland. It features a 540-rpm forage blower built to center-fill silos 100 feet tall. The 37-inch diameter feed hopper makes it easy to unload with cross conveyors.

A large 12-inch auger moves crop to the fan with maximum efficiency. The 60-inch diameter fan is straddle-mounted for years of dependable performance.

Other features include:

- Eight adjustable replaceable paddles
- A heavy-duty, shearbolt protected PTO
- Reversible blower band
- A 9 foot telescoping pipe

When you have a tall order to fill, the Model 60 from New Holland is just the forage blower to fill it. Stop in for details.

Blue Seal To Hold Open House

HAGERSTOWN, Md. — Blue Seal Feeds, Inc. will hold an open house at its new feed manufacturing plant in Hagerstown, on Saturday, April 12 from 9:30 a.m.-4 p.m.

The public is welcome. There will be tours of the brand new mill as well as door prizes and refreshments. Visitors will be treated to a firsthand look at how animal feed is manufactured.

The newly constructed plant has the capacity to produce 175,000 tons of feed per year for horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, rabbits, wild birds, dogs and cats, and other animals. The highly computerized, fully automated plant is designed to be an exemplary neighbor, environmentally friendly, and safe for employees.

The plant contains 20,000 square feet of warehouse space plus storage capacity for 5,800 tons of more than 100 different ingredients with 65 of them in bulk. The Hagerstown plant will serve 130 independent feed dealers within a 250-mile radius and commercial dairy farmers within 75 miles. The new facility will be capable of manufacturing mashes, pellets, crumbles, flaked and crimped grains, sweet feed, and extruded products.

Ziegler Named To Board

DEKALB, Ill. — William M. Ziegler of Monsanto Company was named to the board of directors of DeKalb Genetics Corporation, the company said. His appointment brings the number of directors to 12.

Ziegler, 39, joined Monsanto in 1993, where he has led the company's commercial development efforts in the corn and soybean business. His responsibilities include investments in the seed industry and development of new products, such as YieldGard® corn.

Previously, Ziegler was principal with the management consulting firm of Booz, Allen, & Hamilton. He also served as manager of business development at General Electric Company. Ziegler earned a bachelor's degree in chemical engineering in 1979 and a master's degree in chemical and biochemical engineering in 1979, both from the University of Pennsylvania. He received a master's degree in business from Harvard University in 1982.

Ziegler is a member of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, the Commercial Development Association, the National Corn Growers Association, and the American Soybean Association.

Industry Leaders Merge

GREENSBORO, N.C. — The coming of the new year has brought a new name to the crop protection industry.

Novartis Crop Protection, Inc., officially formed on Jan. 1, 1997, was created from the merger of agricultural industry leaders Ciba Crop Protection and Sandoz Agro.

Novartis Crop Protection, headquartered in Greensboro, N.C., is the nation's largest supplier of crop protection products. Based on 1995 results, Ciba was the crop protection leader in the United States with more than $1.1 billion in product sales. The merger with Sandoz strengthens that position, and provides Novartis with stronger research and development capabilities than Ciba or Sandoz had before combining operations.

"Our customers can expect an even higher level of service than they received under the Ciba and Sandoz names. Novartis will combine resources from two industry leaders to set a new standard of customer service, and to help our customers leverage new technologies to meet their crop protection needs," said Emilio J. Bontempo, president of Novartis Crop Protection.

Novartis Crop Protection lists more than 10 prospective products in its development pipeline, with five expected to receive Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) registration within the next three years.

3 Million Tractors Produced

ATLANTA, Ga. — Fifty years ago this year, at what is now Massey Ferguson's plant in Coventry, England, a new tractor came off the assembly line that was to change the face of mechanization on farms throughout the world.

The tractor was the renowned TE20 with its revolutionary Ferguson System of tractor weight transfer with ground-engaging implements, making it possible for small, lightweight tractors to perform like machines three times their size.

This year, on October 15, 1996, tractor number 3 million, an MF375, 60 PTO horsepower, high-performance tractor, was produced at the Massey Ferguson Banner Lane, Coventry, plant, the single largest factory in the western world devoted solely to tractor production.

The success of the early TE20, enabling farmers to cultivate and produce crops more efficiently, economically and safely than ever before, laid the foundation for the remarkable record Massey Ferguson® tractors hold today.

Massey Ferguson tractors are the world's best-selling brand and the company has achieved this leadership position for the last 33 consecutive years.

Ninety percent of the tractors produced at the Coventry plant are exported to world markets and it is estimated that more than one million MF® tractors are at work throughout the world.

On October 15, 1996, a 60 PTO horsepower MF 375E was the 3,000,000th tractor to come off the assembly line at Massey Ferguson's plant in Coventry, England — the single largest factory in the western world devoted solely to tractor production. Massey Ferguson celebrates its 150th anniversary in 1997.

Business Completes Seminar

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Clinton Martin of Automatic Farm System in Lebanon has completed the 1997 Product and Service Seminars presented in February by Sukup Manufacturing Company in Defiance, Ohio.

Seminar attendees learned about the latest development in the Sukup line of grain handling and drying products, including improvements in the Unloading Equipment line and a new 26 inch Axial Heater, in order to improve their Sukup product knowledge. A service seminar was also offered. Topics covered included the installation of Sukup products, particularly the Sukup Fastir Stirring Machine, and troubleshooting techniques.

Cargill Markets Hybrids With Monsanto YieldGard Gene

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Cargill and Monsanto Company have finalized a licensing agreement for YieldGard corn. Cargill Hybrid Seeds will include a YieldGard gene for insect-protected corn in several of its highest yielding 105- to 115-day corn hybrids for spring planting.

YieldGard uses a naturally occurring protein to protect corn plants against the European corn borer, a damaging pest that has been difficult to control until this recent technological breakthrough.

"This is an important part of our commitment to provide customers a full spectrum of elite hybrids with the latest technologies," said Dr. Rod Greder, worldwide technology and business development manager for Cargill's Seed Division.

"We already offer hybrids with herbicide tolerance. Now protection against European corn borer is available from Cargill dealers in several of our best-performing hybrids for spring planting," said Greder.

"We are pleased that Cargill customers can take advantage of the best protection available against one of the worst insect pests in corn," said Jon Nienas, Monsanto's marketing manager for YieldGard.

"Corn borers infest an estimated 60 million acres of corn in the United States. They cause millions of dollars in damage, with yield losses running as high as 30 percent," Nienas said. "Effectiveness of chemical controls can be limited due to difficulty in timing of spray applications. YieldGard corn offers protection throughout the plant, throughout the season."

YieldGard provides a different and highly effective approach, Nienas noted. Protection is provided by a protein derived from Bacillus thuringiensis, a common, naturally occurring soil microorganism. YieldGard corn produces a protective protein identical to the one found in nature, and delivers it in virtually every part of the plant where borers feed. The protein is effective in controlling European corn borer, but harmless to humans, livestock, wildlife and beneficial insects.

Hodgson Joins CVC As Sales, Nutrition Manager

SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Cumberland Valley Cooperative welcomes Scott Hodgson as sales and nutrition manager. Hodgson is a 1977 graduate of Penn State University with a degree in general agriculture.

After graduation, he became a salesperson for The Beacon Milling Company, working out of the York location. He sold dairy and swine feed in the York and Adams County areas.

In 1981, Hodgson moved to Beacon's home office in Cayuga, N.Y., and added the responsibility of computer dairy feeding systems to his swine responsibilities. During 1984, he became assistant to the director of nutrition and technical services.

Cargill purchased The Beacon Milling Company in 1985, and soon after, he was transferred back to his home in York to become the plant manager of the York location.

Hodgson accepted the challenge of becoming general manager of Martinsburg Milling Company in Martinsburg, in 1988. Martinsburg Milling went from being a dealer to an independent feed manufacturer with increasing sales during his four years as general manager.

He then spent two years as an independent consultant, working with both farm clients and feed manufacturers, including CVC.

Hodgson's duties as sales and nutrition manager for CVC include continuing CVC's growth as an independent feed manufacturer by new product development, nutritional support for clients and CV employees, and the addition of appropriate products for this marketplace. He will also be responsible for sales training of all Cumberland Valley employees.

Dealership Earns Rating

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Messick's has earned the New Holland Service Excellent rating for 1996.

According to Doug Breneman, service manager, this recognition is based on a thorough evaluation by New Holland service experts of the dealership's service operation.

"To get the Service Excellence rating we have to meet New Holland standards in areas such as service personnel training; shop facilities, tools, and procedures; program administration; even bookkeeping. They look at everything," said Breneman.

He says Messick's personnel work hard to qualify for the Service Excellence rating because it's the best way to insure first-class service for customers.

Webbs Become Distributors

STREET, Md. — Steve and Linda Webb have become independent distributors for the Conklin Company, Inc.

Conklin is a diversified manufacturer of chemicals and hard goods, including agricultural and animal products, building products, lubricants and consumer products.

With headquarters and manufacturing facilities in Shakopee, Minn., Conklin markets its products through a nationwide network of independent distributors. The company had 1996 sales of more than $31 million.

BINKLEY & HURST BROS. INC

133 Rothsville Station Rd., Lititz, PA

(717) 626-4705

In 1939 a railroad siding in north eastern Lancaster County was the setting for an entrepreneur by the name of Walter Binkley to begin his family business. A feed and fertilizer store and fledging tractor dealership was begun. Then years later David Binkley, Walter's only son, joined into the business which became known as Walter Binkley & Son. The J.I. Case Farm & Industrial lines were eventually added to the Huber Tractor line which was already in place. In 1973 two young neighbors, Leonard Hurst and Amos Hurst, Jr., employees of David Binkley, were afforded the opportunity of investing in the business and the present company name, Binkley & Hurst Bros., Inc. was adopted. The feed and fertilizer business abandoned, the new company of eleven employees focused their resources on excellence in the agricultural equipment field. In the twenty-five ensuing years, Binkley & Hurst Bros. has evolved into a forty-five member team of employees committed to supply and service the agricultural equipment needs of eastern Pennsylvania and the surrounding area.

Dairy of Distinction
Dairy Farm Beautification Program

1997 Dairy Of Distinction Applications Sought

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your dairy farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy of Distinction Program of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania will consider your farm for the program's annual recognition awards.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program was first started in 1983 to recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintained attractive farms. The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, and increase their sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by. The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management are other aspects of the farm operation taken into consideration. Roadside judging is conducted during the month of May. Former winners of past years are also rejudged to ensure they continue to meet standards of excellence.

To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk. Applications are available for Pennsylvania from: Stephanie Meyers, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., 219 South West St., Suite 100, Syracuse, NY 13202-1205, Phone: (315) 472-9143; for New York: Carol Weddle, 5249 Route 281, Homer, NY 13077, Phone: (607) 749-2504; or New Jersey: August Knispel, 641 Sidney Road, Pittstown, NJ 08867, Phone: (908) 735-4989. All applications must be completed and returned by Tuesday, April 15, 1997.

Application

PURPOSE OF PROGRAM

Attractive dairy farms give the consumer greater confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales which encourages public support for the dairy industry. The award gives recognition to the dairy farmer for maintaining a well-kept farmstead.

ELIGIBILITY

All Northeast dairy farms producing milk for sale are invited to make application for the award. Dairies receiving the 10 highest scores in each of the 21 districts will receive an 18" x 24" Dairy of Distinction sign to be displayed in front of their farm.

CONTROL HUMIDITY WITH WINTER VENTILATION

Eileen Fabian Wheeler
Assistant Professor
Environmental Control

Agricultural & Biological Engineering

The function of ventilation in cold weather is to control moisture levels in poultry housing. In contrast, summer and mild weather ventilation is used to maintain appropriate air temperatures for the enclosed birds. Fortunately, ammonia, odor, and pathogens are usually controlled along with humidity during winter ventilation.

Where does this humidity come from? Birds exhale fairly large quantities of moisture from their respiratory tract. In addition, water is evaporated from manure. Waste handling practices, animal waterers, and facility cleaning each may contribute more moisture to the air. These moisture sources originate from normal functions within an animal environment yet the moisture level needs to be kept within a range that is healthy and comfortable for the enclosed birds. Decreased bird productivity is a well documented result of poor air quality.

Air at 50 to 60 percent relative humidity is desirable in poultry housing. Below 50 percent relative humidity, dry conditions will lead to a dusty environment and irritation of the bird's respiratory tract. Below 60 percent, many pathogens have trouble surviving and less opportunity to migrate around the barn on water vapor. Therefore, keeping the relative humidity in the 50 to 60 percent range provides protection from dusty and pathogen-laden environments. When air is allowed to reach high levels of humidity, which usually results from an under-ventilated facility, other air contaminants are also elevated. Removal of this poor quality air is essential.

Since the birds are continually adding moisture to the air, moisture should be continually removed with the ventilation system. Several options exist. Relatively small openings (relative to openings used during mild and hot weather) are provided in the sidewalls for continuous air exchange. Even on the coldest nights, these openings need to be kept open for air exchange. Generally, cold but dry air is much less detrimental to animal health than warmer but stale, moisture-laden, poor quality air.

Continuous ventilation should be provided by a continuously running fan. Many broiler buildings are ventilated in winter with interval timers which provide intermittent ventilation multiplied by the minutes out of 10 (or 5) minutes. When these interval timers come close to providing continuous ventilation, indoor air quality will be most uniform and desirable for the birds.

The most important concept to grasp in understanding winter ventilation strategies is that heated air holds more moisture than cooler air. This is merely an intrinsic property of air. Cold, relatively moist air from outdoors can be brought into a poultry facility and, once heated to near the desirable room temperature, will hold much more moisture than the cold air. A rule of thumb in poultry environments is that a 20-degree F increase in air temperature will double the air's moisture holding capacity. This characteristic of air is used to our advantage in ventilation system operation. The cold air that was heated now has a lower relative humidity. It can absorb moisture as it makes its way through the barn. This warm, moisture-laden air must then exit the barn by way of the ventilation fan.

For young birds, heat is added to maintain comfortable and productive facilities. Broiler chicks are started around 90 degrees F, for example, and temperature is decreased a degree or two every few days until the birds are at 70 degrees F. Birds will eat more to keep themselves warm if temperatures are not warm enough. Animals substitute feed for fuel.

It hurts to pay more in fuel bills to keep birds warm but the feed bill is an even larger penalty if warm conditions are not maintained. One common but equally detrimental practice is to reduce or eliminate ventilation in order to conserve heat. Studies have shown that the higher humidity, ammonia and manure gas levels that are created by inadequate ventilation rates reduce animal weight gain and feed efficiency. By maintaining proper and continuous winter ventilation, the higher fuel bills are more than offset by a savings in improved bird productivity and health.

Are heating and ventilating competing functions within a poultry environment? No. They have the same goal: providing good, productive environmental conditions for the birds.

We have chosen to raise poultry indoors for a host of reasons including the provision of a better environment for better productivity. We have to ventilate the building to remove moisture, heat, odor, and gas accumulations. We have chosen to add supplemental heat to achieve better productivity, and in the case of young birds, to maintain their health. It is still cheaper to burn fuel than it is to underventilate and risk decreased bird weight gain and feed conversion and to compromise flock health.

Moisture control in winter is an important function of both naturally and mechanically ventilated facilities. Failure to provide adequate winter air exchange will result in a warm, moist, stale, odorous environment which is unhealthy for animals and workers. Winter ventilation must provide for continuous removal of moisture produced by the enclosed birds.

Penn State Spring Livestock Judging Contest Draws 350

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The 1997 Penn State Spring Livestock Judging Contest was held here recently.

Approximately 350 contestants, including 4-H and FFA youth from across the commonwealth and Penn State students, converged on Penn State's Ag Arena to compete in the annual contest that marks the beginning of the summer show and livestock judging season.

In addition to starting the judging season, the event annually leads off a busy month of activities for members of the Penn State Block and Bridle Club. After the contest, students prepared bulls for the Pennsylvania Meat Animal Evaluation Center Performance Tested Bull Sale and then continued preparations for their annual Little International Livestock Exposition to be held on Saturday, April 19, also at the Ag Arena.

Under the direction of Brian Kreider (senior, dairy and animal science, Lebanon) and Keith Bryan, co-adviser to the Penn State Block and Bridle Club and coach of the Penn State Livestock Judging Team, the contest tested the skills of youth interested in judging livestock.

Members of the 1996 Penn State Livestock Judging Team served as officials for the contest. Swine officials were Josh Brown (senior, dairy and animal science, Kempton) and Annie Harris (senior, ag economics and rural sociology, Simbury, Conn.). Sheep officials were Jen Garman (senior, ag science, Aaronsburg) and Stacey Sands (senior, dairy and animal science, Tunkhannock). Beef officials were Tadd Burch (senior, dairy and animal science, North East) and Michele Ruffing (State College). Wendy Fitzgerald (senior, dairy and animal science, Utica) coordinated the oral reasons rooms in the afternoon. Dr. Ken Kephart and Brian Egan, co-advisers to the Penn State Block and Bridle Club, and Block and Bridle Club members oversaw tabulation.

Coaches of 4-H teams (Chad Cash, York County; Chet Hughes, Lancaster County; and Brian McAllister, Centre County) served as officials for the collegiate professional division that included students competing for a place on the 1997 Penn State Livestock Judging Team that will compete in one more contest during spring semester and several contests during fall semester.

Contestants were required to place six classes, including Crossbred heifers, Angus heifers with performance data, Dorset yearling ewes, Dorset Fall ewe lambs, Yorkshire barrows, and Duroc gilts.

Although the primary purpose of the contest is to provide an opportunity for youth to enhance their ability to evaluate livestock, the contest also serves as a forum to draw young people from across the commonwealth to Penn State to view the quality livestock that are produced at the land-grant institution, and to encourage students to consider Penn State in their future educational plans.

More than 34 teams and 107 individuals competed in the junior advanced division which included placing the six classes of livestock and delivering three sets of oral reasons to official judges. More than 225 contestants representing 70 teams competed in the junior beginner division, which required contestants to place the six classes. Twelve contestants competed in the collegiate amateur and professional divisions.

Tough Tomato Skins Challenge Processors

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Modern tomatoes and the processors who use them are classic victims of unintended consequences.

Over the past 20 years, Ohio State's Stan Berry and other plant breeders have developed tomato cultivars with skins so tough that pests have trouble causing damage. The durable skin also allows growers to let the first-ripened tomatoes stay on the vine longer, permitting a single mechanical harvest when the rest of the crop in the field ripens.

Unfortunately, the skins that are such a blessing in the field are a blight once they reach the processing plant. Ohio State University's Sherry Barringer and Winston Bash will address the problem in their talk, "Factors Influencing Tomato Peeling," at the joint meeting of the Ohio Fruit and Vegetable Growers Congress and the Ohio Roadside Marketing Conference, Feb. 5-8 at the Toledo Seagate Center.

"These new varieties are bullet-proof," said Bill Hirzel of Hirzel Canning Co. and Farms in Toledo. "They have extremely good holding properties, and that's what we want. But they have such a good jacket on them, we have trouble getting them unzipped."

In fact, a study two years ago by Bash, director of Ohio State's Food Industries Center, revealed that mechanical peelers remove an average of 18 percent to 20 percent of the tomato, too. Sometimes as much as 25 percent of the tomato is wasted. And what's lost is the best part of the tomato — the layers that give tomatoes an appetizing color and texture, said Barringer, assistant professor of food science and technology.

"You can really see it," Barringer said, "When they're peeled right, the tomato is a nice deep red. It it's overpeeled, the tomato will be orange-red and you can see the white veins in it."

Skins on some tomatoes are so tough that, despite the mechanical peelers, they fail to be peeled completely. That's no good, either, Hirzel said.

"The consumer will not allow us to have any skin on a canned tomato," Hirzel said.

Years ago, processors used boiling water or steam to remove peels, he said, but to do that now would cause the tomatoes to become too soft. Modern methods, which chemically treat the tomatoes, move them along a conveyor belt and massage them with rubber discs to remove the peels, are better, but not good enough with today's extra-strong peel.

"We fixed one problem and made another," Hirzel said.

Barringer is working with other Ohio State researchers and with Hirzel and other processors to investigate ways to solve the problem. And she's attacking the problem on several fronts.

"Processors know that tomatoes they get from one farmer will peel well, while the same cultivar from another farmer won't," Barringer said. "The farmers are from the same region and have the same weather."

Hirzel agrees. "One load will peel real nicely. The next one comes in, and with the same concentration, temperature and time on the mechanical peeler, it's much more difficult to peel."

Hirzel believes much of the difference is because of the different "ages" of the tomatoes that come into the plant. Older tomatoes, those that are first to ripen, are the most difficult peel.

"We know tomatoes that are not mature peel easier — with less time, lower temperatures and less concentration in the peeler," Hirzel said. "So at any given peeler setting, there will be overpeel of the immature tomatoes just so we can get the older ones peeled."

Barringer believes there are things farmers and processors can do to combat the problem. For one thing, fertilization levels might affect tomato peels.

Working with Ohio State horticulturist Mark Bennett, Barringer is completing the second year of a three-year study testing different fertilization programs. She hopes to make recommendations on optimal fertilization taking both yield and peelability into account.

Barringer is also looking at what processors can do differently. Washing the natural waxes off the peel helps enormously. Barringer is conducting a series of studies looking at a variety of washes, finding some that are much more effective than others However, they need further study to define the time, temperature and concentration needed, and to make them economical.

County 4-H Leaders Attend Forum

More than 250 adult and teen 4-H leaders from across the state attended the first Pennsylvania 4-H Horse Forum in State College March 7-9.

Keeping 4-H youth and horses safe was the underlying theme of the conference.

Volunteer leaders as well as extension and university staff presented sessions on various aspects of the 4-H horse program. Topics included competition and youth, fire safety, coaching a horse judging, hippology, and/or horse bowl team(s), horse show management and safe and unique training techniques.

Attendees from Dauphin County were Amy Klinger, Dauphin; Jason Kramer, Dauphin; Melanie Seiders, Halifax; Fred Rudy, Halifax; Gary Laughlin, Milton Hershey School; Susan Orban, Milton Hershey School; Angela Vasquez, Milton Hershey School; Summer Blue, Milton Hershey School; Anna Orman, Milton Hershey School; and Aurita Maldonado, Milton Hershey School.

Nationally known author, illustrator, and centered riding instructor Susan Harris presented several workshops on safety, horse gaits and movement, and learning horse anatomy through drawing. One of the more unique sessions offered was Harris's drawing of the muscular and skeletal systems on a gray horse.

Pat Comerford 4-H horse coordinator, presented a general session on horse events, activities, and program plans for the 1997-1998 program year. The safety program update, which detailed the new protective headgear ruling was presented, followed by a question and answer period.

Throughout the weekend, presenters including Harris and Ward Studebaker, PSU Horse Herdsman supported the wearing of protective headgear while mounted. Tom Walker, CEO of Horseland USA and a judge, also spoke on the subject of protective headgear and offered examples of protective headgear available on the market.

The Power Sourcers, an energetic group of Penn State college students, presented a session for the teen leaders at the conference on team building and teen activities. Teens took part in an hour of fun ice breakers and team building activities which they can take back to their own county program.

Educational exhibits from corporate sponsors as well as 4-H clubs and the horse program were on display throughout the conference. By attending the forum, teen and adult leaders had the opportunity to receive new programming ideas and to share ideas and concerns with other leaders.

4-H Tractor Club To Begin

The "1997 Wayne County 4-H Tractor and Farm Machinery Safety Certification Program" will begin on Tuesday, April 1, at 8 p.m. at the Wayne County Cooperative Extension in Honesdale.

Other meeting dates are April 8, April 15, April 22, and April 29.

This 4-H program is designed mainly for 14 to 16-year-old youths that intend to work on area farms this spring and summer. It can also be valuable safety training for others currently operating or working with farm tractors or other farm equipment.

A total of five classroom-type meetings are scheduled for this year's program. One of these meetings will be conducted at an area farm equipment dealership.

The requirements of this 4-H project include completing a 4-H tractor and machinery safety project book, taking and "passing" a comprehenisve, written examination and successfully competing in a 4-H tractor driving and machinery handling test.

All young people interested in this valuable 4-H project training are encouraged to contact the 4-H office so that the necessary 4-H project materials can be ordered. Participants must attend all five meetings plus the tractor driving event that is planned for this 4-H project area.

Every 4-H member that completes this project will also receive a 4-H Tractor and Machinery Maintenance and Safety Completion Certificate.

Contact the Wayne County Cooperative Extension for additional information, (717) 253-5970, ext. 239.

Equine Garage Sale Open

On Saturday, April 12, the annual tack swap or "equine garage sale" will be held at the Northampton County 4-H Center, Nazareth. The tack swap will be held from 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

There will be new and used items for sale for the English, western, or dressage person. Also there will be horse crafts, Breyer horses, clothing, and other horse-related items. All sellers must preregister for a sale table — there are no consignments. No live animals are permitted.

Food, courtesy of Backtrackers 4-H Horse and Pony Club, will be available during the sale hours. This is a rain/shine event being held inside in a non-heated building and outside.

Anyone wishing information concerning the tack swap can call Jan Martin at (610) 837-7294. Anyone wishing general information on the 4-H program in Northampton County can call Phyllis Laufer, Northampton County 4-H coordinator, weekdays at (610) 746-1970 or your local agricultural extension office.

Seeks Markets

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius has announced that the department is seeking producers interested in operating stands at farmers' markets along the Pennsylvania Turnpike during the 1997 growing season.

"Gov. Ridge has pledged to work with our agriculture community to find new markets for Pennsylvania-grown and produced products," Brosius said. "While we have been successful at assisting our farmers with increasing their exports, we also are committed to expanding the domestic market through innovative and strategic methods.

"Over the past three years, the Turnpike Farmers' Markets have proven to be very popular with the traveling public and provide farmers a new and excellent opportunity to market their products."

Brosius noted that there are four Turnpike farmers' markets. They are located at the Allentown (Lehigh County), New Stanton (Westmoreland County), Sideling Hill (Fulton County), and Valley Forge (Chester County) service plazas.

Although many vendors will be returning for 1997, there will be opportunities for additional vendors at each of the markets.

Pennsylvania producers who grow more than 50 percent of their total sales are eligible to participate. The vendors may supplement their own production with produce that is also Pennsylvania-grown.

Products which may be sold at the Turnpike farmers' markets include bedding plants and flowers, fruits and vegetables, baked goods, maple syrup and honey products, meat, eggs and herbs.

Farmers interested in becoming vendors at any of the markets may request an application by contacting Mike Varner, Bureau of Market Development, 2301 North Cameron St., Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408. The telephone number is (717) 787-2376.

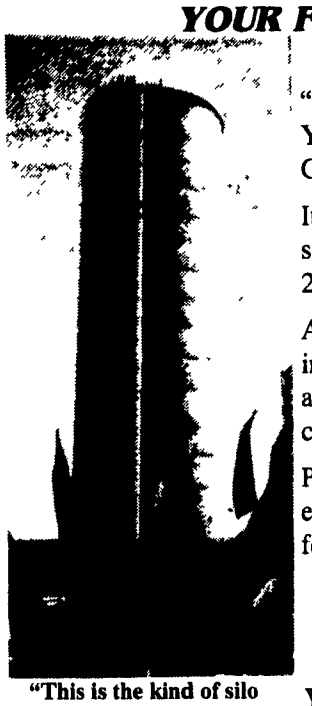
THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING YOUR FEED STORAGE!!



"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

"HOW WILL YOU BE STORING YOUR VALUABLE FORAGES AND GRAINS IN THE 21st CENTURY?"

It's not too early to begin planning your storage and feeding systems for the year 2000 and beyond.

As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency; this can have as great an influence on PROFIT as milk price changes.

EARL SINKS - Brock, Texas

You Can Sell The Milk
When You Use Vitamix Instead Of Antibiotics

A dairyman's helper gave a cow an antibiotic and forgot to make a written record of it. He then went on vacation and for the next five days, the milk from 900 cows went down the drain!! The $42,000.00 lost would have bought enough Vitamix to last for years and years for that dairyman's whole herd.

You can sell the milk when feeding Vitamix. Vitamix is a mixture of vitamins, minerals, enzymes, electrolytes, and proteins, especially calculated to feed the immune system. Vitamix is the result of over 20 years research and over 20,000 feeding experiments. Vitamixingredients are so micro pulverized and easily digestible that some of them melt in the mouth and are absorbed into the bloodstream while the cow is still chewing her feed. Her organs increase the output of antibodies (white cells) within minutes, and can often double the output of antibodies within one hour after consuming Vitamix, and you can get Vitamix without a prescription. Vitamix is all natural. You just put Vitamix in the feed whenever there are symptoms of a contagious disease or infection.

The cow's immune system can cure any and every kind of contagious disease and infection quicker, safer, more consistently than any medical drug in the world when you support the immune system. The immune system is the only real defense. I keep cows and horses for feeding experiments.The last time I used an antibiotic was in 1984 and haven't lost a cow, calf or horse since I quit using antibiotics.

Any time any human or animal gets a contagious disease or any kind of infection, it is for one reason, and one reason only; The immune system failed to do an adequate job of defending against it. In other words, the immune system let you down.

Every time you use antibiotics, sulfa drug or an immune stimulator; you weaken the immune system. See the Physicians Desk Reference (PDR) for more information on the side effects of antibiotics. The information in the PDR was provided by the drug companies that make the drugs as required by law.

Shouldn't we be feeding the immune system instead? Support the immune system. Their lives and health depend on it. Feed Vitamix every time for every contagious disease or infection.
Vitamix is the best procedure in the world for Mastitis. It is quick and easy and you can sell the milk when feeding Vitamix.

How long does it take when you take the "Support the immune system approach?" I have seen calves that were down, had high fever, bloody scours and were dehydrated. One needed help to hold its head up. The only thing I gave them was Vitamix and water. In three hours, I had to run them down and get them cornered to give the Vitamix. Dairymen tell me that Vitamix is faster than anything else they ever used.

When there is a serious case of anything contagious or infectious; I give Vitamix once an hour for three hours, or until they are back on their feed and doing noticeably better. I continue Vitamix six times daily for a few days. Vitamix typically costs only $2 to $3 a day for a cow (less for a calf). The total cost for one cow for one illness is typically $8 to $10 from start to finish.

Vitamix costs less than antibiotics, and you can get it without a prescription. Vitamix is completely drug free!!! You can sell the milk when you use Vitamix !!! (When you use antibiotics, you pour the milk out for 5 days, sometimes more. You risk making a mistake and pouring all your milk out for 5 days or more.)

You save money Every Time you use Vitamix. Get some Vitamix now to keep on hand. Use Vitamix as soon as you see symptoms of anything contagious or infectious. You will know you did the right thing within hours.

Preventing and curing all contagious disease and infections boils down to this. Increasing the capacity to produce white cells (Antibodies). All white cells are made by the bone marrow. Antibiotics cause "bone marrow depression" thereby reducing its ability to make white cells to fight diseases and infection (See Physician's Desk Reference Book [PDR]).

I have done over 20,000 feeding experiments on healing the body, and have yet to find an incurable contagious disease or infection.

Why sit around waiting for a miracle? You can order Vitamix right now. Miracles are great and they do happen now and then; if you wait around one might happen for you. But the immune system is a miracle. You can order Vitamix today and keep it on hand, then you will have it when you need it.
Vitamix ...when you need a miracle. The best source of information about Vitamix is people who have used it. Ask a friend about Vitamix.
